Milk Production Must Keep Up With Burgeoning World Demand

Dairy Awards Program Features Wilson, Honors Industry Contributors

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — For now, forget love.

What the world needs more of in the coming years — desperately — is milk.

In the view of one dairy leader, the global milk supply is losing ground at a time when population is expanding and major producer countries are cutting back, according to Doug Wilson, chief executive officer, Cooperative Resources International, Shawano, Wis.

Wilson spoke to about 125 dairy producer and industry representatives Wednesday evening at the annual Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders Banquet and Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association awards program at the Holiday Inn East in Harrisburg. Included were several award presentations.

Wilson quoted statistics from USDA and other sources that point to the need for the U.S. and other global dairy producers to increase production. In fact, with the steadily increasing world population, producers must double overall food production by the year 2035.

That's going to prove challenging, according to Wilson. The world produces about 1.04 trillion pounds of milk, with an annual increase of only .1 percent per year during the last five years — all while the population has increased 10 times faster.

"The global milk supply is losing ground," noted Wilson. He said that Western Europe produces 23 percent of all the milk in the world, but production is slated to decline 5 percent in the next five years, with cow numbers headed downward to the tune of 5-10 percent in key countries. Latin milk production, at 10 percent, is declining. Argentina, a major global ag producer, has seen numbers decline 20 percent during the past 12 months. "Twenty-six percent of the people in that country are unemployed and the Mafia is in charge of the government," said Wilson.

Farm-City Exchangees Experience Life On The Other Side Of Fence

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Working on the farm versus an office job has perks and disadvantages, according to four participants in Lebanon County's annual job exchange program.

During the Farm-City Banquet Tuesday evening at the Lebanon Valley Expo Center, the exchangees shared highlights from their experiences. Dairy farmer Gary Lentz spent a day working with Tony Buckholz, chief executive operator of Goodman's Vending, where he learned to maintain their motto, "Clean, Full, and Working."

Lentz said he realized that the company is in the same boat as farmers — they have to get bigger to adjust to the economy.

At least in one area, Lentz is greatly relieved to be a farmer, "Tony needs to go through six steps when he has an unproductive employee, but it doesn't take me long to get rid of an unproductive cow."

Buckholtz said that he was jazzed up for his day on the farm until the alarm went off at 3:30 a.m. In the barn, he was in for another rude awakening when he faced walking down the middle between two rows of the 70-head herd.

"It was like walking in a water park trying not to get wet," Buckholtz joked.

Buckholtz learned to put on milkers, mix feed, dehorn calves, and breed cows. "That was the biggest plastic glove I've ever see-

Food And Farms Summit Focuses On Hunger, Health

WILMINGTON, Del. — The U.S. needs to deal with problems in its food system in order to attain a healthier population and a "truly democratic society," according to a keynote speaker at the 4th Annual Future of Our Food and Farms Summit here Dec. 5 and 6.

"We are in a really major crisis in our country," said Dr. Desmond Jolly at the event attended by some 300 people from the Mid-Atlantic area.

Jolly, ag economist and director of the University of California Small Farm Program, said that the U.S. is caught in a "paradox of plenty," where food is available in abundance, yet upward to 50 million living Americans suffer from hunger or "food insecurity" at some time in their lives.

Meanwhile, many people are suffering from obesity and "the whole array of health problems that go with it."

This dilemma of overconsumption and underconsumption of food, the most basic need of humans, Jolly said, needs to be resolved in order to build a "truly democratic society.

"Visitors from other countries are awed by the abundance and variety of foods in our supermarkets," he said. "Our food system presents this dazzling array of

CATTLE Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers sold fully 1 00 lower, with the fancier high Choice and Prime stock as much as 2 00 lower The only grade that was firmer was the early Select steers, and even they tapered off after buyers adjusted their sights There never seemed to be any fire under Thursday's run, as buyers were not very willing to compete over the noticeable increase in Yield Grade 4's If the steers weren't over-finished, they were sent to town to soon, and therefore sold at Select prices Even though there is less support coming from the futures contracts this winter, with February closing down another 57 points on Thursday at 77.35, there still is no need to rush them to town early, as it was apparent buyers are back to looking for the good ones There was the usual reputation lots on hand, although even they failed to meet Tuesday's active trade Holstein steers sold steady to .50 higher, with most of the increase coming in the high Choice and Prime category There was a fairly good Holstein supply on offer, although they had to be pretty nice to bring above 60 00, as buyers were quick to discount on weights and finish There were not enough fed heifers on hand Thursday to test the market, although a lower undertone was noted Slaughter cows sold steady to 1 00 higher on a very good run Buyer attendance was very good for the large run Steady cow carcass cutout values have neither added fuel or water to the fire this week, with the deciding price factor much of the week just boiling down to buyer participation Slaughter bulls sold firm to 3 00 higher on a run that included nearly 100 head The supply included 39 percent steers, 5 percent heifers, 37 percent cows, 7 percent bulls, with the balance feeders

This philosophy held true for the entirety of the graded sale as several of the pens of Number 2's outsold the Number 1's Holstein heifers also sold sharply higher as prices are once again above 500.00 for the really fancy ones The supply included 373 head in the

New Holland Feeder Pig Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
December 11, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Receipts 432 Last Week: 556 Year Ago 801

Compared to last week, slaughter pigs sold sharply higher in very active trading. Demand was very good for all grades and weights, especially for the light 20 pounders; which sold as high as 300.00. Prices continue to be supported by the holiday demand One hundred percent of the run went to kill, as prices were well over what feeders are able to pay. An ice storm moved in early Wednesday morning, turning local roads into skating rinks. However, even the cold rains outside could not cool off Wednesday's action. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weights.

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.4208-1.5318. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.4319-1.5318 mostly 1.4430-1.4874.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices· .9850-1.0300; Class III - spot prices - .8050-.8900.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week: In - 30, Out 0; last week: In 26, Out 0; last year· In 110, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week: In 0, Out 0; last week: In 0, Out 0; last year: In 0, Out 0.

The weather continues to play a big role in milk production and sales. The effects of last week's big snow storm are still being felt in North Carolina where more than 500,000 customers were still without electricity a week after the storm. This did impact milk sales and deliveries into those areas. This week, an ice storm moved through the Middle Atlantic area, which caused widespread traffic problems. Heavy rains in Florida are taking their toll on the milk flow. The recent gains in Florida's milk output were slowed by all the rain they have had. Milk needs in Florida are about steady and suppliers did have to import some milk to supplement local supplies. The milk flow in the rest of the Southeast is still increasing, but at a slower pace than it has been.

Milk production in the Northeast and Middle Atlantic areas is about steady. Fluid milk supplies are light in most sections of the East. This week's ice storm forecasts triggered another round of retail panic buying. This left some bottlers struggling to meet all the "add ons" and a few plants ran out of milk for the second week in a row. Outside of the storm area, bottled milk sales are reported as fair to good. Surplus milk volumes are holding at tight levels. Manufacturing plant intakes are light, but most contacts feel that milk receipts will be increasing about this time next week. Some cheese operations are still taking normal volumes while others are trying to ease back on production.

The condensed skim market is mostly steady with prices unchanged on Class II; lower on Class III. Some operations continue to clear all their solids as condensed rather than operate their dryers. The fluid cream market is not as firm as it has been. Offerings are heavier and more excess cream is looking for a home. Spot prices are steady to slightly higher as multiples are steady but the CME butter price did increase fractionally. Demand from ice cream producers is fairly good as many try to step up output to make up for their anticipated down time during the holidays. Bottled cream producers are running full out and extra loads were needs to fill demand Eggnog production is in full swing. Cream cheese output is about steady. Churning is also steady to heavier, but some producers are limiting cream intakes and/or paying quite low multiples. More excess cream is moving to Midwestern butter makers.

The OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC — THIS WEEK WITH

DECEMBER 16–22, 2002

WINTER SOLSTICE, DEC. 21

CALM, AND NOT-SO-CALM, DAYS

The ancient Greeks and Romans believed Halcyon Days to occur around the time of the winter solstice It was supposedly a period when the seas were calm enough to allow the kingfisher (halcyon) to lie quietly afloat on its nest at sea These days have come to signify a time of peace and restfulness In 1773, however, neither the seas nor mankind were particularly restful at this time December 16 marks the date of the Boston Tea Party when colonists disguised as Mohawks tossed 342 crates of prized English tea off of East India Company ships and into Boston Harbor

There are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea.

Henry James American writer (1843–1916)

OPINION

Who Calls The Shots?

Some local township ordinances— laws that some believe to be simply renegade, frivolous, and illegal — are challenging the Right To Farm Act.

Recently, the House refused to vote on Senate Bill 1413, a simple rule that would have created liability for those willing to restrict large-scale agriculture in communities. SB 1413 expired Nov. 27 after an amended version passed the Senate by a vote of 45-3.

The amendment to the Right to Farm Act may not need an update. This whole issue of trying to limit expansion of farms by townships needs another solution.

The solution? Ag preservation areas. County planners need to work closely with local townships to ensure ag preservation areas exist, free of new development, free of the restrictions that nonfarm general public, many from urban areas, want to place on farm expansion.

The heart of the bill contained language that would allow farmers to be reimbursed for legal fees when bringing lawsuits against townships for ordinances ruled illegal in court. All this did was set farmer against township, township against farmer. It was reaction — not pro-action.

A bigger issue for farmers: who is calling the shots? Walt Peechatka, executive vice president, PennAg Industries Association, spoke Wednesday afternoon this week during a segment of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders Annual Conference in Harrisburg. Peechatka noted that those who try to advise townships to adopt these frivolous lawsuits include environmentalists, preservationists (not conservationists), animal rights groups, those who moved from cities to countryside, anti-ag activists, and groups that have considerable success because they are well-funded and can communicate easily via Internet. They put ridiculous restrictions on the ways farmers need to conduct themselves simply to make a living.

John Bell, legal counsel with Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, agrees with Peechatka that farmers are not calling the shots at the local level. This issue is "the most frustrating issue in the 21 years I've been with the Farm Bureau," Bell said.

More and more, whether they like it or not, legal councils representing farm families have to be adversarial and confrontational, Bell noted. Farmers need to become more educational to the nonfarm public and to "sell ourselves." Producers need to get to know township officials, need to become involved with the media in telling the story on a personal basis, and need to work to promote themselves.

Years ago, farmers were the majority — now they're the minority on many township supervisor boards. They need to actually become members of township supervisor boards if ag is to remain viable.

If we don't solve these issues, if animal ag remains under attack, noted Peechatka, then "long-term animal agricultural survival is in jeopardy," he said. "We must continue to be model farmers and model agribusinesspersons and our standards of ethics must be above reproach. Ag must begin calling the shots if we're going to remain strong and remain the number one industry in the commonwealth."

To Complete Year-End Business Planning

Regional Farm Management Agent Roland Freund reminds producers to complete any 2002 business planning before celebrating the New Year!

The calendar gets very full with church, family, and fun celebrations at this time, so business tasks tend to end up on the back burner. But prudent farm managers will take steps to save taxes, know if they have accounted for finances accurately, and collect the information needed to accurately measure 2002 business performance.

There are a number of essential tasks for the year-end "to-do list." First one should pay all bills that are due. This is a good business practice, and it simplifies the task of preparing the list of accounts payable if there are none! Each dollar spent could save you 50 cents or more in taxes.

Second, Freund suggests producers should count their blessings and review their charitable giving. There is much to be thankful for this year. At this season, give generously to your church and charities. Not only will you share your blessings, but contributions give you the same tax break as advance purchases of feed or supplies.

Another important year-end step is to complete farm records. Next year starts a new record period for most farmers. Confusion reigns when two sets of books are used simultaneously, so it is important to get all available transactions recorded promptly. However, it may not be possible to finally close the books until some statements are available. These include bank statements giving you the amount of interest and principal to record.

Next, producers should take inventory, since the end-of-year inventory is essential for analysis. For accuracy it should be completed before you retire New Year's Eve, but having to use a flashlight can be cumbersome! If it is done carefully, every year balance sheet changes can be calculated for the 2002 accrual adjustments. Bank balance-sheet forms can be used to record the information. Computerized systems should have them built in.

If you need a worksheet or spreadsheet, call (717) 240-6500 or e-mail rfreund@psu.edu. The "Dairy Farm Feed Cost Control" spreadsheet can help with silo capacity and such computations. Go to http://capitaldairy.cas.psu.edu/, click on "Tools Archive," and scroll down to download it.

The "Current Assets" section of the inventory includes "Growing crops." Enter the value of seed, fertilizer/lime, and fuel invested. Record crops for sale and feed including feed in mill storage and prepurchases. Significant supplies of fertilizer, chemicals, and semen must be listed and valued. Feeder livestock and growing heifers should be included.

"Accounts receivable" (milk check, crop/livestock sales etc.) and "Cash Balance" (checking plus savings plus what's stashed in the mattress) must be accurately recorded to make any cash flow check reliable.

Feed and livestock inventories should be valued at a conservative farm-gate value. That means market price less commission, less the cost of getting them to the selling point. If the auction sells a single ton of hay for $150, buyers might only offer $110 for each of your 1,000 tons of hay equivalent at your farm.

As a rule of thumb, consider each dry matter ton of haylage to be worth no more than a ton of hay made from the same cut. To convert high-moisture shelled corn to its dry bushel equivalent, use the formula Pounds wet × D.M (as decimal) ÷ 47.36. Example: (50 tons at 70 percent D.M.) is 100,000 pounds × 0.7 ÷ 47.36 = 1,478 bushels. For ear corn, use the factor 59.2 in the formula. With heifers, it may be appropriate to change values to reflect the market swings, but keep them conservative.

In December you should also update your list of capital assets. Your accountant needs information on sales and purchases of all capital assets to maintain the depreciation (basis) record. But you need to do your own fair market valuation annually.

Unless you are planning to sell out, avoid wild fluctuations in dairy cow values, and don't escalate land values annually. These gimmicks can seriously distort analysis. Aim to reduce the value of equipment in inventory and dairy buildings and structures by 10 to 20 percent annually.

At this time you should also begin a liabilities list. Bank statements will furnish information on loan activity later. You need to pay particular attention to unpaid bills, especially those more than 60 days due, and credit card balances.

Finally, plan to pay taxes. Family living draws and principal payments on nondepreciable land family residence or gold bars can (with very few exceptions) only be paid with after-tax dollars. A family with four exemptions spending $50,000 on the above should expect to "render unto the Caesars" of federal, Social Security, state, and local a total of $13,000. If they spend $75,000 or $100,000 they can anticipate tax bills of $22,000 and $32,000, respectively. If exempt from Social Security, the same family would expect tax bills of approximately $7,000, $13,000, and $20,000 at the three levels cited above.

To have such levels of these benefits and consistently go to extreme measures to pay lower taxes is called fraud. Using debt to finance tax avoidance can create future economic hardship.

Getting a good start on these tasks will help you to have greater joy and peace to face next year with courage and hope.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

OBEYING OUR ANGELS

Background Scripture:
Matthew 1:18-25; 2:13-23.
Devotional Reading:
Isaiah 11:1-5.

It was sometime after midnight, and I was probably the only one in the house still awake. The house was a villa inhabited by a lawyer and his wife, our hosts for the night, on the outskirts of Nuremburg, Germany. We were part of a small group of youth leaders who were touring Bavaria with the director of youth work for the Evangelische or state Protestant Church of Bavaria.

I spoke a little German, but was not very successful in conversing with out hosts. So my wife and I felt somewhat isolated. Even worse, my wife seemed to have a fever and was obviously coming down with something. She was sleeping, but I was still awake, wondering what to do if she really became seriously ill.

I must have dozed off, because some while later I was awakened with the immediate sense that someone else was in the room. I looked at the foot of the bed and there was just enough light from the bathroom door that I could make out the figure of a man. I don't know how, but almost instantly I "knew" that this was the Christ through whom I had been praying for help. With a clarity that I can still hear in my mind's ear, I heard him say to me just two words: "Fear Not." Then he reached forward and touched the bed and it began to vibrate. And then the experience was over.

Just A Dream?

Now, many of you will say that it was "just a dream" and, if I was hearing this story from someone else, I would say that myself. But at that moment and 40-plus years later I did not and do not think it was "just a dream." But even if it was a dream, I remain confident that it was Christ himself who brought me this message: "Fear Not."

There was no reason given as to why I should not fear. The presence of Christ alone was sufficient reason to "Fear Not."

We often overlook the fact that, in the Nativity story, Joseph, Mary's betrothed, on four different occasions was given messages from God during dreams. The first of these came as Joseph was contemplating divorcing Mary because he has learned that she was with child and he knew he was not the father. But, in a dream, an angel informs Joseph that Mary has conceived this child by the power of the Holy Spirit and the son to be named Jesus ("God saves") will indeed "save his people from their sins" (1:28). This message from God changed Joseph's heart and, when he awoke, "he did as the angel of the Lord commanded him . . ." (1:24). His upbringing, culture, and personal emotions would have led to divorce, but he obeyed God's angel.

Another dream came sometime after the departure of the Wise Men: an angel came to warn him to flee with his family to Egypt. Now the trip the angel was proposing was dangerous and daunting, but once again Joseph obeyed his angelic messenger. Later, at the death of Herod, an angel appeared to him in a dream and told him to return with his family to Israel. And, arriving there, a dream warned him to take his family to Galilee.

Different Folks

Why did Joseph receive these messages only in dreams? Why did he not have visions or even hear the "still, small voice" of God?

The answer is that God speaks to us in many different ways. Some of us are open to "the still, small voice" within, others dazzling visions. Some of us neither hear nor see the message, but it can bubble up into our consciousness whenever we give God the opportunity.

There have been times in my life when I would have jumped at the chance to hear a voice or see a vision, but it has happened only a few times to me in dreams. Otherwise, I get God's message through scriptures, the deeds and words of others, in the events of the world around me — and often as a slowly growing certainty.

The trick is not in hearing, seeing, or sensing our angels but, like Joseph, in acting on the messages they bring.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Ken Bailey
Professor of Agricultural Economics, Dairy Marketing and Policy
Penn State

Dec. 6, 2002
FUTURES MARKET FOR 2003 LOOKS BETTER

- Class III futures at $11.90 for 2003.
- Current market conditions weak.
- U.S. joblessness rate for November up to 6 percent.

The short-term market information is providing a mixed bag.

First, the bad news. The USDA announced a price support tilt that will likely reduce the market price of nonfat dry milk. The October dairy products report shows strong production for cheese and butter. USDA announced that the Class III price for November is down to $9.84 per CWT. Finally, the U.S. joblessness rate for November rose to 6 percent.

There is some good news out there. The Grade AA butter price at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange this week is at $1.11 per pound, above support-price levels. USDA has announced a plan to deal with surplus powder in government warehouses. The futures market for 2003 looks promising. And finally, Holiday sales after Thanksgiving Day looked very promising. This is pointing to a stronger than expected holiday shopping period.

Some dairy producers are being offered fixed price contracts on their milk supply for 2003. They can contract all or part of their future milk production relative to a Class III, Class IV, cheese, or butter price. Generally speaking, I really like fixed price contracts. They are very cost-effective to the producer, you get one price for the entire year, and they are easy to deal with. However, be forewarned: you will get exactly what you contract for!

That said, my advice is to 1) don't lock in all your future milk production at a fixed price, unless you really want to, and 2) only consider a price that is close to the five-year average.

The Class III futures at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange as of Dec. 6, 2002 averaged $11.90 for all of 2003. That is very close to the five-year average Class III price of $12.02 per CWT (1998-2002). Right now, I'd take "average" over "below average" any day.

So, if you are offered a fixed price contract for all of 2003 at a Class III price close to $12, I would recommend you contract part of your production. Consider 20-40 percent for 2003. This will provide you with greater security and will help cash flow the business the first half of next year. Generally speaking, most analysts expect milk prices will be lower the first half of 2003 and higher the second half.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
December 6, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER Summary for week ending Dec 6 2002 Total Receipts 403 300 last week 184 900 Direct 57,000, last week 40 500 Video/Internet 27 600 head, last week 26,000 Auction Receipts 318,700, last week 118 400 This week's reported auction volume included 31 percent over 600 lbs and 43 percent heifers

Compared to last week, feeder cattle and calves sold 1 00-3 00 higher in active trading Yearlings continue to be scarce and buyers are turning to heavy calves as a substitute These 600-750 lb calves tend to be fleshy and hard to sell, but with outstanding feedlot performance they might just finish in time to be based off the April CME Board Lighter calves, weighing from 400-600 lbs were also in good demand this week and routinely sold near 1 00 per pound in most areas west of the Mississippi River This prompted western buyers to go ahead and order some more of the less expensive Southeastern cattle, despite harsh weather conditions, resulting in higher trends from Louisiana to Florida

The first big snowstorm of the season to hit the Southern Plains came through on Tuesday dumping as much as 10 inches of snow and making highways hazardous Over 125 fender benders were reported in Amarillo Texas on Tuesday night and the slick conditions followed I-40 east through Oklahoma City and Joplin Missouri This did not slow the marketing of cattle in the 'Show-Me' state where nearly 55,000 head were reported in the auctions covered by the USDA and the Missouri Department of Agriculture Livestock Market News Service

Direct feeder cattle sales across the country were slow for current delivery but are starting to pick up for future delivery and contracts based off the CME Feeder Futures Most backgrounders can lock-in a handsome profit on their feeder cattle for spring delivery Many are opting to do this and not have to sweat the market through the holidays There are still plenty of variables to worry about, like a rough winter and poor weight-gains or perhaps missing out on a continued market rally and a big home run But forward contracting does help limit the downside risk and gives producers some peace of mind They might just sign their name and then take the down payment to Las Vegas for the National Finals Rodeo

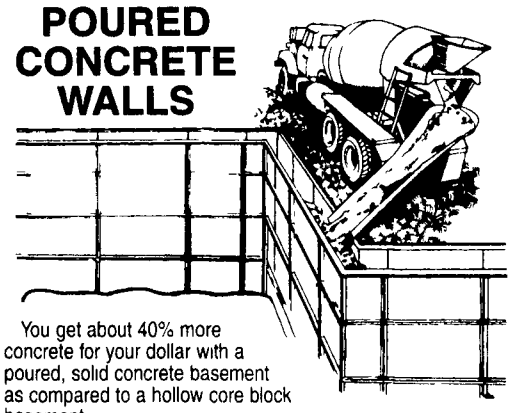
POURED CONCRETE WALLS



You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement

A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!

This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth wind water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration

Best of all, thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques poured solid concrete basements are competitively priced

Solid Concrete For:

- Manure Pit Walls
- Hog House Walls
- Barnyard Walls
- Chicken House Walls
- Retaining Walls
- House Foundation Walls
- Silage Pit Walls

Milk Production Must Keep Up With Burgeoning World Demand

New Zealand and Australia, noted Wilson, are very efficient dairy producers, but produce only 4 percent of the world's milk supply. Eastern Europe produces 18 percent of the world's supply. China, with almost five times the population of the U.S., has a per-capita milk consumption of 15 pounds with a consumption of 6,700 metric tons of cheese, or less than one pound per capita (compared to 30 pounds per person of consumption in the U.S.) There are 4.2 million dairy cows in China, but production per cow is low, at 3,500 pounds per cow per year.

India is the largest dairy producer in the world, with 65 million breeding age dairy animals, but 40 million of them are buffalo. Average farm herd size is two.

The bottom line, noted Wilson: the U.S. needs to increase milk production substantially in the next 10 years. By the year 2013, dairy farms need to produce 165 billion pounds per year (an increase of about 7 billion pounds between now and then).

Wilson noted we can get to that position with 60,000 dairies at 150 cows average per farm producing 18,250 pounds per cow, or 37,000 dairies at 245 cows per dairy producing 18,250 pounds per cow. More likely, in Wilson's estimation, we can do so with 45,000 farms with 200 cows each on average producing 18,250 pounds per cow.

In 2013, there will be about nine million dairy cows in the U.S., producing a stable supply of an additional 7 billion pounds of milk.

Producers will do this despite a lot of factors, but those issues will be dairy herd size-neutral, producer-age neutral, and geographically neutral, Wilson noted.

"Are you aware that there are more people in our prisons than on our farms?" Wilson said. "You are outnumbered by the people in our prisons. It's a reminder that no one else is going to take care of us."

All this is going to happen within a time of stark consolidation of many industries, including food retail.

Wilson pointed out that, in 1997, 10 major food retailers accounted for 35 percent of all grocery sales in the U.S. In 2007, the same 10 major retailers will represent 70 percent of all groceries sold in the U.S. "When they speak, we will listen," Wilson said.

Wilson noted that when the U.S. placed a man on the moon in July 1969, there were 566,000 dairy producers in the country averaging 19.8 cows per farm. In 1982, there were fewer dairy producers, at 278,000 all told, with an average of 39 cows per farm. In 1993, the farm numbers decreased even more as the herd size rose, down to 162,000 producers but with 59 cows per farm on average. In 2002, there are 74,000 dairy producers in the U.S., and by 2013, Wilson projects there will be about 45,000 producers.

Yet production numbers are actually greater from the nine million cows today compared to the 24 million cows in the U.S. 60 years ago.

And "purchase-product working time" has decreased. To earn enough money to purchase a half-gallon of milk in 1919, the average person would have to work 39 minutes. In 1950, that number fell to 16 minutes. In 2002, the average U.S. citizen worked only seven minutes to buy a half-gallon of milk.

"We have to learn to manage the future and not have the future manage us," Wilson said. Producers must become motivators for their team and learn to be proactive. We also must learn to beef up our research and development on new dairy products, according to Wilson.

Wilson said that $25 million is spent in the U.S. on research and development. "Tiny New Zea-

Cornell Enology Lab Hires First Extension Educator

GENEVA, N.Y. — Hans Justrich brought his family about 4,000 miles from their home in Malans, Switzerland, to Geneva, N.Y., to become Cornell University's first extension enologist. In his words: "I needed a challenge."

For the second-generation winemaker who began working in Thomas Henick-Kling's lab at the New York State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva, N.Y., July 25, that challenge is embodied in a new country, new people, new grape varieties, and a new climate.

"We're lucky to find someone with his expertise and experience," said enologist Henick-Kling, who directs the Vinification and Brewing Technology Lab where Justrich will also be working. "Hans has a wonderful background in wine making, experience with small and large wineries, and familiarity with the varieties of grapes that are economically important to New York."

Justrich's enthusiasm for his work is readily apparent. "Wine making is great — it's an art and a way of life," he said. "Every year is a new challenge and a new experience."

This attitude, according to Ben Gavitt, a research support specialist in Henick-Kling's lab who manages the New York State Wine Analytical Lab, makes Justrich well suited to the position. Gavitt will be working closely with Justrich to test samples brought in by New York wineries.

Before coming to Cornell, Justrich consulted with grape growers and wine makers in Graubunden for 18 years, disseminating information and organizing wine tastings and workshops. Previous to that, he worked for a research station in plant pathology in Zurich, Switzerland, and at a winery in California. He earned his advanced degree from the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology-Zurich in 1979.

n...and I had to hold the cow," he said.

He was amazed at the record keeping Lentz performed using a laptop computer, the cost of equipment, and the value of a cow.

"Whenever I look at the milk in our vending machines, I have a whole new appreciation (for the work behind the scenes)."

Dairy farmer Cheryl Horst, Richland, spent the day at Hotel Hershey. Working with Mary Miller, staff development manager, Horst had no difficulty adapting to eating a leisurely buffet breakfast in the circular dining room overlooking the Hershey gardens, walking the posh halls, and later eating lunch. Horst learned the three deadly sins of the service industry: never say "no," "I don't know," and "It's not my job."

On the downside, Horst said she saw the stress of keeping guests and staff happy. "At home, I can go to the barn without dressing up, combing my hair, and be grumpy — the cows don't care."

Another big benefit of farming, Horst said, "I can kiss my boss anytime I want and be there for my children."

Of her day on the farm, Miller said, in retrospect it seems quite silly that she wore makeup and did her hair before working in the barn.

Miller said of helping prepare udders, flushing embryos, and injecting needles in the milk vein, she learned "I am definitely a hands-on person, and not a hands-in person.

The Century Farm Award goes to the Rev. Henry C. Heagy, who said that his calling was the ministry but he made his living on the 85-acre Annville farm. Heagy is surrounded by a few family members, which includes 12 children and their spouses, 40 grandchildren, and 16 great grandchildren. From left, are Jay and Alice Fittery, Ruth and Bob Hitz, Henry Heagy, Heidi Fittery, Elva Allen, and David Heagy.

The Lebanon Valley Chamber of Commerce Ag Committee selected the farm of Rev. Henry C. Heagy for the Century Farm Award. Heagy said, "My calling was to the ministry, but we made our living off the farm."

He and his wife Dorothy, who passed away in 2001, raised five daughters and seven sons on the farm. All seven of those sons farm today — some farm in other states.

The great, great, great grandfather of Rev. Heagy purchased the farm in 1830, which was transferred through the years. Henry was born in 1921 and worked for his father until age 29. In 1958, Heagy and his wife

Roundup, for example. As effective as Roundup® is for soybeans, you should know more before you use it on your corn. Using it every year, weed resistance could become an issue. For some growers it already has. The answer? Over-Order Premium To Be Reduced In Steps

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) has voted to incrementally decrease the over-order premium from $1.65 to $1.25 per hundredweight in the first four months of 2003. The over-order premium for January will be $1.50 per cwt. In February, the over-order premium will be $1.40 per cwt. The premium will then step down to $1.30 per cwt. for March and to $1.25 per cwt. for April, May, and June.

The board believes it is necessary to cushion the effect of lowering the over-order premium and, therefore, reduced it in four increments. As the lower premium takes effect, producers should be receiving monthly Milk Income Loss Contract payments through the Farm Bill, which will help lessen the effect of the lower premium.

Although market conditions still warrant an over-order premium, the dollar amount was reduced. Based upon testimony received at the Nov. 6 Over-Order Premium Hearing, the board found that the market for Pennsylvania produced milk is threatened. Because of the difference between the Pennsylvania over-order premium and premiums paid out of state, customers are beginning to demand that Pennsylvania processors seek arrangements that would allow them to avoid paying the over-order premium altogether.

While the board members are aware of the financial stress on the state's dairy farmers, and are very concerned about the situation, they believe it would be of no benefit to Pennsylvania producers to set an over-order premium at a level that would cause Pennsylvania processors — for competitive purposes — to seek ways to avoid paying the over-order premium. To maintain a strong dairy industry in Pennsylvania, all segments of the industry must be healthy. To continue the $1.65 over-order premium in relation to out-of-state milk costs provides a very strong incentive for both in-state and out-of-state processors, based on their customers' demands, to either source their raw milk from out-of-state supplies or to structure their transactions in such a way that the over-order premium is not paid to Pennsylvania producers.

This was a difficult decision for board members. However, they felt it would be better for the Pennsylvania dairy farmer to receive a lower over-order premium than to receive no premium, and possibly lose a market for their milk.

The over-order premium is an amount paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for their Class I (drinking) milk that is produced, processed, and sold in Pennsylvania. The current over-order premium of $1.65 per one hundred pounds (cwt.) of milk is scheduled to expire Dec. 31.

worked for his father until age 29. In 1958, Heagy and his wife took ownership. The Heagys milked cows, raised hogs and laying hens, and farmed as many as 700 acres some years. He continues to help his sons with the farming operation.

"We farm because we like it," Heagy said of the legacy his sons are continuing.

The Century Business Award went to Palmyra Bologna Company begun in 1902. The company started with two employees and now has 55. They have 10 smokehouses each used to process 13,000 pounds of product weekly. The company, the largest producer of Lebanon bologna in the world, offers daily tours and samples.

Additional activity included a sheep-to-shawl auction, which garnered $300.

choices. We have banished seasonality. We can have anything we want any time we want it.

"So it comes as a shock to these (foreigners) when they find out that we have people in this country who suffer from hunger," Jolly said.

Lack of money and physical mobility are the chief reasons some people are cut off from food choices, according to Jolly.

Award winners at the 4th Annual Future of Our Food & Farms Summit are, holding plaques, Lorraine Matthews, Philadelphia nutritionist, and Michael Hamm, educator at Cook College of Rutgers University. Joining them are Sandy Sherman of The Food Trust, and Zane Helsel, Rutgers University.

While "capitalism and democracy has produced abundance," he said, our food distribution system is failing to meet its democratic principle of offering maximum choice to individuals.

"If we have the precondition for the individual to flourish, why can't we make that happen in our society?"

According to Jolly, the average CEO in the U.S. makes about 2,000 times as much money as a factory line worker. "One has to wonder if that's a democratic society," he said.

But Jolly also pointed out forces that are at work to solve problems in the food system. These include the rapid, recent growth of the small farm movement and local food initiatives across the country.

"The overall movement is alive and throbbing with optimism," he said. "We need to catch and ride this wave."

The USDA had spent much of the 20th century "expediting small farmers from their farms in the name of 'bread for the world,'" Jolly said.

Then, in 1997, a group of black farmers from the South sued the USDA for policies they claimed were discriminatory against small-scale producers.

In response, Dan Glickman, U.S. secretary of agriculture at the time, began to change USDA policy with respect to different scales of farming. In 1998, he started the USDA Small Farm Comission, claiming it was "time to act," to reverse the trends of the 20th century. The resulting Small Farm Policy "laid out a major change in USDA philosophy and approaches," Jolly said.

Various inititatives were launched to help small farmers, including the Fund for Rural America and the Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education (SARE) project.

While these programs are a step in the right direction, Jolly said that much more must be done to provide direct assistance to small farm innovators, and to "craft a strategy to allow farmers to make investments to get them over a hump.

"Small farmers need to be on the cutting edge of change just like big companies. We have come a long way since 1997, but we still have a long way to go," he said.

Jolly called the expanding organic movement and this year's release of national organic rules by the USDA a "good step," but warned against the ills this growth could bring.

"As organic ag goes mainstream, it is taking on many of the patterns, syndromes, and problems that we notice within the conventional ag system," he said.

Jolly ended his message on an optimistic note.

"We have major challenges in our food system," he said. "We also have major opportunities."

Two people were recognized at the summit for their exemplary commitment to healthy food systems.

Dr. Michael Hamm, dean of Academic and Student Programs at Cook College, Rutgers University, received the Mid-Atlantic Innovation and Leadership Award.

Hamm's long history of work in the field of sustainable food systems and agriculture includes co-founding and directing the New Jersey Urban Ecology Program, an effort that brings together individuals from diverse backgrounds to address sustainable food systems in New Jersey. The program involves training urban youth to sell fresh produce at farmstands in their communities, and the Farm to School Project, which works to improve the connection between locally grown food and the school lunch program.

Desmond Jolly, California ag economist, tells Food & Farm Summit guests that a healthy democracy needs healthy farms, families, and communities.

Hamm has also facilitated the New Jersey Cooperative Gleaning Network, co-directed the N.J. Food Stamp Nutrition Education Network, and founded the three-acre Cook Student Organic Farm.

In January, Hamm will begin working at Michigan State University as the C.S. Mott Distinguished Professor of Sustainable Agriculture.

Lorraine Matthews, a nutritionist in the City of Philadelphia Dept. of Health for more than 32 years, received The Future of Our Food and Farms Career Achievement Award.

Matthews, who grew up on a farm in Iowa, "has worked in almost every capacity as a nutritionist in Philadelphia," said Sandy Sherman of The Food Trust in presenting the award.

Beside working as a nutritionist, Matthews has also served on numerous research and education committees and is active in hunger advocacy and community-housing programs. In October, she received the Medallion Award from the American Dietetic Association.

Matthews said she enjoys bringing her farm experiences to the work of educating people about food and nutrition.

"There's an awful lot of people in this world who don't know where their food comes from," she said.

Matthews lectures widely on a variety of topics and has authored more than 40 articles on health care, legislative issues, health promotion, and participative education.

Sessions throughout the two-day summit addressed such topics as: food for every child; harvesting support for locally-grown food; sprawl: a threat or an opportunity for food and food security; nutrition education; successful small-farm cooperatives; new ventures for African-American farmers; keys to farmland protection; youth innovators; reconnecting agriculture, food, and community; reaching hungry people through miraculous collaborations; direct marketing; and food safety from field to fork.

The 4th Annual Future of Our Food & Farms Summit was organized by the Northeast Sustainable Agriculture Working Group (NESAWG) and sponsored in part by Land O'Lakes, Northeast SARE, Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, and the Pennsylvania Nutrition Education Program.

Other featured speakers included Dr. Marion Nestle, professor and chair of nutrition and food studies at New York University and member of the FDA's science board, and Michael Castle, U.S. representative from Delaware.

Castle affirmed the need for both non-government and government organizations to join together in eliminating hunger and educating people about nutrition.

A billion people in the world suffer from hunger and malnutrition, Castle said, with 33 million in the U.S. living in households that deal with hunger, including those "who are not just hungry but are physically suffering."

Inadequate delivery systems are a major reason not everyone has enough to eat, according to Castle. Facilitating more equitable food distribution is "where the real solution takes place," he said.

U.S. Rep. Michael Castle, Delaware, speaks at Food & Farms Summit.

Penn State Experts Write Forest Estate-Planning Book

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When you are dead and gone, what will happen to that tract of forestland you worry about managing? Two experts in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences have written a book to help you have some say.

"Estate Planning Opportunities and Strategies for Private Forest Landowners," by Michael G. Jacobson, assistant professor of forest resources and extension forester, and John C. Becker, professor of agricultural economics and law, is available on the National Timber Tax Website at http://www.timber-tax.org. The book is available only on the Website because of continuous changes to tax law.

"Printed copies likely would become outdated quickly," said Jacobson. "The Web enables us to update the information easily.

"Although there is intense discussion about repealing federal 'death taxes,' commonly known as the Federal Estate and Gift Tax," he said, "private forest landowners in the United States need to understand the role that their forest assets play in their overall estate. They also need to appreciate the importance of coordinated planning to avoid conflicts and compromises to prudent forest management goals."

Failing to consider the impact of estate and inheritance taxes can disrupt effective forest management, he noted, or result in heirs abandoning forest ownership or fragmenting it in ways that squander the benefits of past management.

For more information, contact Jacobson at (814) 863-0401.

Milk Production Must Keep Up With Burgeoning World Demand

land spends $32 million on dairy research and development," said Wilson.

The dairy leader believes taxpayer dollars need to be spent on opening up foreign markets for U.S. dairy products. And producers need to take the time to open up lines of communication with key employees and become leaders by enthusiasm.

At the meeting and banquet, several dairy leaders were honored for their work.

The Charles E. Cowan Memorial Award, presented to a dairy producer who has demonstrated superior management capabilities and provided outstanding leadership within the industry, went to John Reed Rodgers of Belleville. Rodgers, owner/operator of Plum Bottom Farm, Inc., has devoted his leadership skills to several breed organizations. He has served as president and vice president of the Pennsylvania Ayrshire Association and the U.S. Ayrshire Breeders Association, in addition to eight years on the board of the World Federation of Ayrshire Breeders.

Rodgers has used a rotational grazing system for his 50-cow Ayrshire herd. He has been active in the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and the American Forage and Grassland Council. Rodgers has also served as board member of the Penn State Agricultural Council as well as president, vice president, and secretary.

David Smith, executive secretary of the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association, noted that Rodgers helps "educate the state's teachers about the importance of agriculture by speaking to hundreds of teachers at the annual Ag Awareness Foundation workshops. He has also provided leadership to the Ag Awareness Foundation by serving on its director board."

Rodgers has received many awards, including the American Forage and Grassland Council Outstanding Farm Award in 1963. He has made seven visits to third-world countries. He noted that he shares his honors with the farmers of a country of which he made seven trips to — Kazakhstan in Central Asia.

Berneta Gable, Snider Homestead Dairy Farm, Bedford County, is the recipient of the Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association 2003 Distinguished Dairy Woman Award.

After graduation from Penn State, Gable returned to the home farm. In 1984 she purchased the dairy herd and farm. Since that time she has doubled the size of the dairy herd while consistently increasing production. Today, she manages a 110-cow Guernsey and Holstein herd on 310 acres with a focus on top-quality forages.

Cow comfort, quality herdsmanship, and sound breeding decision have led to Gable's development of the current 18 Excellent cows in the herd. The show ring has also been a part of the success at Snider Homestead, noted Dixie Burris, DairyOne Pennsylvania, who presented the award. "Berneta has bred many All-Americans, national show winners, and national class leaders."

Said Burris, "Berneta's respect in the dairy industry has led to her being a role model to many youth. She has spent countless hours toward helping education youth about the dairy industry."

Gable has hosted PDCA Judging Schools, Pennsylvania Holstein Junior Judging School, annual Penn State collegiate judging teams, and area elementary schools. Gable has also provided leadership to the Pennsylvania Guernsey Breeder's Association, serving as president. Gable serves on the national board of the American Guernsey Association. She received national recognition by the World Dairy Expo as the 2000 Dairy Woman of the Year.

The 2003 Pennsylvania Dairymen's Association Extension Award was presented to Clyde Myers, Berks extension agent. Myers was born and raised on a dairy, swine, poultry, and crop farm in northern York County. He obtained his undergraduate degree in animal science from Delaware Valley College in 1972 and obtained, in 1982, a masters of agriculture education from Penn State.

Myers was an ag instructor at Red Lion High School in York County from 1972-1977. Since 1977 he has been an extension agent for Penn State in Berks County with major responsibilities in dairy, livestock, land preservation, and agriculture zoning.

Myers has coordinated, counseled, and worked cooperatively over the years with DHIA, Holstein Club, Dairy Farmers Association, and Berks County Agricultural Land Preservation Board, noted Mike O'Connor, Penn State Cooperative Extension, who presented the award. "Clyde has provided numerous educational activities, such as tours, in-depth seminars, regular farm visitations, newsletters, and phone consultations. He annually holds a Dairy Day program and his newsletters are distributed to dairy producers on a regular basis."

Myers also conducts dairy nutrition schools, milking schools, reproductive schools, and meetings on herd health issues.

Myers has also facilitated many Farm-City activities, with a directly positive effect on the dairy industry, noted O'Connor. Myers has been "at the forefront of planning, implementing, and evaluating the Berks County Farm-City Banquet, which is in its 19th year." The banquet annually attracts approximately 350 participants. And for many of those events, noted O'Connor, dairy has been the topic of focus.

Myers has also conducted numerous teacher seminars on agriculture with a strong emphasis on the dairy industry. Myers recently conducted an intensive one-week "Food and Fiber Course" for high school educators, which gives them educational activities to use with their students covering dairy and ag issues.

Myers has also coordinated Ag In the Classroom activities for local schools with trips to a dairy farm, dairy processing plant, and dairy distribution business.

Myers' work on farmland preservation efforts have led to Berks County having one of the most successful programs in the country, according to O'Connor. Myers has assisted in ag preservation zoning, ag security areas, and economic development within Berks County. Myers has conducted several research projects benefiting dairy clientele, with research on bird control, fly and odor problems, intensive pasture management, animal housing, and ventilation.

Myers lives with wife Judy near Shartlesville. They have two daughters, Kelly, a Penn State graduate in elementary education, and Melissa, a junior at Penn State majoring in health and human development.

Earlier in the day, several producer and ag industry panels examined the position of producers, processors, and retailers in the Northeast, and a comprehensive panel on the freedom of dairy farms to operate when the Right to Farm Law is challenged by local townships.

More information about the annual Stakeholder Conference is scheduled for the February issue of Lancaster Farming's Dairy Plus.

SAFEGUARDS FOR SPECIALIZATION

Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent

In an earlier article I discussed the advantages of specialization for small farming operations. This enables individuals to concentrate capital on one major enterprise, do what they do well, and increase the volume of their profit center. One example might be where one farmer raises replacement heifers for three dairy operators, one farmer raises crops for the heifer operation and the three dairy families, while the dairy families combine resources in one operation with efficient buildings and parlor.

Specialization is great In theory! But it could be a disaster in practice. People could fail to maintain commitments, communications between parties could break down, and disputes could arise over ownership or any number of details. Parties involved could lose their shirts if any one of these businesses fails. Before entering into such arrangements, all parties need to be aware of the potential pitfalls.

Potential Solutions/ Safeguards

It is possible to make arrangements which protect all of the people involved. To do this it might be necessary to create appropriate business structures, create comprehensive operating agreements, create legal rental/ lease agreements, and define exit and dissolution procedures. Let's briefly explore each of these safeguards.

• Business structures. Remember, handshakes are not good enough! The future of the family and the farm is at stake. Informal arrangements will not suffice — even within a family of parents and children. A partnership is the simplest business structure to organize and operate. It can work well in a family situation, but it may not protect everyone against financial risk.

A limited partnership might provide a little more protection, but it might not work where all parties are actively engaged in the business.

A newer structure is the Limited Liability Company (LLC). This has much of the flexibility of the corporation (or Subchapter S), but it is less costly to organize and operate.

Select what best fits the relationship between the parties and the complexity of the business. Fortunately the law requires better financial record-keeping and accounting of companies and corporations. This also serves to protect the interest of all the parties involved.

• Operating agreement.Handshakes are not good enough! Regardless of the chosen business structure, every one of them must have an operating agreement. It is important to define each party's contributions, each party's responsibilities, and each party's rewards. It should also define what dispute resolution procedure will be used. All these things are vital because they create a relationship of trust between the parties.

• Rental/lease agreements. Handshakes are not good enough! It is necessary to define lease conditions for the use of another person's capital assets. This includes land, buildings, livestock, and equipment. In joint business arrangements it might be beneficial to build a structure owned by a business on a different person's land. Special legal and lease arrangements need to be drawn up which will satisfy the bankers and protect the business asset from ending up in Grandma's estate. This will help to create a relationship of trust between the parties.

• Exit/dissolution procedures. More problems and disputes arise over dissolution of business arrangements than over their formation. Handshakes are not good enough! It is important at the time of formation to agree on how a business will be terminated or how individuals can withdraw.

If a person or his heir is forced through death or injury to withdraw, that might be considered involuntary withdrawal. One arrangement for financial settlement might be defined for that situation. But if one party just decides he wants to get out and take his equity with him, then this could be considered a voluntary withdrawal. The agreement might define the payout to the latter as 70 percent (or some such percentage) of the payout in the case of involuntary exit.

Dissolution provisions need to be defined so that they protect the business from serious financial crisis but still protect the heritage of those individuals who have invested equity in it. This will help to create a relationship of trust between the parties.

• Seek professional advice. Those considering specialization or any business arrangements need a team of professionals to guide the process. The accountant or CPA who will maintain the records is a key person. Others to be consulted include farm business advisers and bankers. Attorneys should be engaged to draft the necessary agreements and other legal documents. Remember, there should be a different attorney to represent each party to any agreement.

All these safeguards are necessary to create a relationship of trust between all parties. The future will be bright for farm families engaged in specialized and cooperating business arrangements where trust, cooperation, and communication are maintained.

2002 Swine Progeny Test Under Way At Livestock Evaluation Center

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently announced that the state Department of Agriculture is conducting the 2002 Swine Progeny Test at its Livestock Evaluation Center in University Park, Centre County.

"The swine progeny test is a very effective tool provided by the Department of Agriculture at a minimal cost to the producer," Secretary Hayes said.

"The test provides comprehensive data and the ability to identify desirable traits which are attractive in today's marketplace."

The Department of Agriculture's livestock evaluation center swine progeny test evaluates pens of barrows and gilts for 60 days in a controlled environment. Then the pens are judged at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, and a carcass evaluation will take place at Hatfield Quality Meats.

A total of 20 pens are on test this year. The 77 Pennsylvania-owned barrows and gilts on test this year represent a diverse cross-section of Pennsylvania's swine industry.

Producers will be eligible for premiums at the 2003 Pennsylvania Farm Show based on the placings in the live and on rail evaluation of the entries.

To accelerate and elevate the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's support of the livestock industry, the department has embarked upon the construction of a new, world-class Livestock Evaluation Center.

"This construction project, in excess of $6.4 million, is moving toward completion," Secretary Hayes said. "Agriculture is our No. 1 industry in Pennsylvania, contributing over $40 billion annually to our economy. To keep Pennsylvania's livestock species out-front in the quest of genetic excellence, we need to provide 21st century facilities."

To better serve the swine breeders of Pennsylvania and the nation, this new center will provide the necessary facilities to test for superior genetic traits.

"Now it is time for a test facility that better reflects what our livestock producers need," Secretary Hayes said. "This new complex is 10 times larger than the current facility operated by the Department of Agriculture. Our new Livestock Evaluation Center is over 178,000 square feet and will include learning venues for students of agriculture and a meeting place for agriculture conferences."

With the expansion of the Livestock Evaluation Center, an estimated 140 boars can be placed on test, providing more proven genetics to the swine industry.

Pennsylvania is home to 3,000 swine farms. Gross income for Pennsylvania pork production in 2000 was $156 million, an increase of $48 million from 1999.

For more information on the Livestock Evaluation Center, the Swine Progeny Test, or Pennsylvania's swine industry, contact the Department of Agriculture at (717) 787-4737 or Glenn Eberly at the Livestock Evaluation Center (814) 238-2527.

Managing The Hispanic Workforce Conference Scheduled

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Agricultural managers employing Hispanic or multicultural workforces will want to be present for one of the 2003 Hispanic Workforce Management conferences sponsored by Cornell and Penn State universities.

Building on the success of the 2001 conference, the 2003 conference features a dynamic program and nationally prominent speakers who will offer useful insight into practices and attitudes that will help ensure success with a multicultural workforce. Featured topics include:

• Exploring cultural characteristics: What should I know and why is it important?

• Blending cultures in the workplace.

• Four factors for success with your Hispanic employees.

• Mentoring and coaching new managers: how can I help my best Hispanic employees move into supervisory positions?

• Expanding employee skill sets: moving your workers into different parts of the operation.

• Language barriers: how can I best overcome them?

• Gaining multicultural acceptance in the community: what can I do to help my local community accept this new and necessary workforce?

• Hiring a legal workforce.

In addition to meeting and talking with speakers, conference participants will have the opportunity to meet and compare management strategies with other successful business managers.

This year, the conference will take place in two locations. The Pennsylvania site will be Jan. 28-29 at the Grantville Holiday Inn. The New York site will be Jan. 30-31 at the Canandaguia Inn, Canandaguia, N.Y.

For registration information, call Robin Huizinga at (607) 255-4478, or e-mail Robin at dmconf@cornell.edu. You can see the agenda and register online at www.ansci.cornell.edu/prodairy.

NCBA Asks Congress To Intervene On Australian FTA

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) President Wythe Willey recently sent a letter to members of Congress urging their support and input as the Administration prepares to negotiate a free trade agreement (FTA) with Australia.

Willey, a cattle producer from Iowa, says, "The U.S. is already the least restricted and largest beef import market in the world, and NCBA sees no net benefit for the U.S. beef industry from an FTA with Australia."

The letter to Congress is the latest in a long line of correspondences from NCBA and other agriculture groups to the Administration and Congress urging caution in trade negotiations with Australia, and suggesting that more efforts be focused on the current World Trade Organization (WTO) negotiations.

"We continue to believe that the multi-lateral WTO negotiations provide the best strategy for reducing unfair trade barriers and opening markets for U.S. agricultural products," says Willey.

"Only through multi-lateral negotiations can the challenges and opportunities for the industry be observed simultaneously."

NCBA says trade negotiations must address the current challenges being faced by U.S. agriculture such as reducing tariffs, expanding Tariff Rate Quotas, export and production-distorting subsidies, and Technical Barriers to Trade issues to prevent further disadvantage to U.S. beef producers.

"I strongly encourage you to express caution to the Administration about launching FTA negotiations with Australia or New Zealand, and to reject any final agreement with either of these countries that results in tariff reductions or expansion of Tariff Rate Quotas on a faster timeline or to a greater magnitude than is agreed to through the multilateral WTO negotiations," says Willey.

Commercial Floriculture Production To Be Measured

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania ranked sixth nationally in wholesale sales of floriculture crops in 2001 with a wholesale value of sales by commercial flower and foliage producers that totaled $180.6 million, up $9.9 million from 2000.

In 2001, Pennsylvania's wholesale value of cut flowers sold totaled $4.6 million and sales of bedding and garden plants in flats, pots and baskets totaled $75.4 million. The wholesale value of sales for unfinished plants and propagation materials totaled $30.9 million. The total covered growing area for Pennsylvania in 2001 was 24.0 million square feet.

The Commercial Floriculture Production Survey will be used to produce reliable, accurate data on key items such as area of production, number sold, value of sales, and production. Complete and timely reporting by growers will ensure that reliable, objective data on current commercial floriculture production are available to the public and the industry. Accurate industry statistics are crucial to obtaining research funding and government support on various issues.

In late December, approximately 1,767 Pennsylvania floriculture operations will receive questionnaires for this survey and in December, non respondents will be contacted by an interviewer for either a telephone or personal interview. It is vital to record this growth so supporting industries and policy makers can provide necessary resources. For example, leaders from the Pennsylvania Floral Industry Association encourage grower participation in this survey, because it is crucial to have accurate data on the floriculture industry.

Results from the survey will be released April 24, 2003, in the "2003 Floriculture Crop Summary" report. It will also be available on the Internet at http://www.usda.gov/nass/.

PMMB Announces Class I Price

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Milk Market Board (PMMB) announced the prices to be paid to Pennsylvania dairy farmers for November Class I milk (beverage) as an average of $14.65 in the western areas of the commonwealth, and an average of $15.14 in the central and eastern areas of the commonwealth. These prices include the over-order premium of $1.65 per one hundred pounds of milk.

Farmers, whose milk production is pooled under a federal order will receive a marketwide blend price based upon the value of all classes of milk. However, the blend price received will vary as the component composition of a farmer's milk differs from the established benchmarks of 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.9 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids.

Benefits Of Sweet Corn IPM Valued In The Millions

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — In just one year, Pennsylvania vegetable growers realized more than $13 million in economic and environmental benefits by using integrated pest management tactics in their sweet corn crops, a recent study estimates.

Integrated pest management, or IPM, aims to manage pests — such as insects, diseases, weeds and animals — by combining physical, biological and chemical tactics that are safe, profitable and environmentally compatible.

The study, conducted by Jason Beddow, a graduate student at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University, found that IPM in Pennsylvania sweet corn crops produced economic benefits of about $6.7 million and environmental benefits valued at about $6.8 million in one growing season.

"This research makes it clear that IPM provides significant economic and environmental benefits to the state," said Ed Rajotte, Pennsylvania IPM coordinator and Penn State professor of entomology, who served on Beddow's advisory committee.

The study was designed to help develop a uniform set of techniques for evaluating the economic and environmental effectiveness of state IPM programs. The research used Pennsylvania and Massachusetts sweet corn IPM programs as case studies.

Pennsylvania growers plant more than 20,000 acres of sweet corn annually, ranking the state among the top ten nationally in sweet corn production. But this $25 million crop is at risk to such devastating pests as the corn earworm, fall armyworm and European corn borer.

As part of the project, Beddow surveyed sweet corn growers to collect data on the growers' use of selected production practices, with an emphasis on pesticide use.

Respondents included both large and small farms, ranging in size from 2.5 to 2,500 acres. The results of the survey indicate that the majority of respondents use several IPM tactics in their sweet corn operation. Ninety-two percent of respondents reported rotating at least some of their sweet corn with other crops, while 77 percent and 91 percent, respectively, said they scouted for insects and weeds before deciding to apply insecticides and post-emergent herbicides.

More than 60 percent of the growers cultivated sweet corn fields to control weeds. When the practice was used, it was employed on an average of 51 percent of sweet corn acreage. Overall, the technique was used on 26 percent of acreage.

An important component of the Pennsylvania sweet corn IPM program is a telephone hotline (800-PENN-IPM) and related Website (http://pestwatch.cas.psu.edu) that provide statewide scouting information for important sweet corn insect pests. Exactly half of the respondents reported calling the hotline. Users of the service made an average of 4.7 calls to the toll-free number over the course of the growing season.

According to Beddow, the adoption of IPM practices may result in a combination of cost increases and decreases. For example, IPM adoption is expected to decrease the cost of chemical pesticides as non-chemical controls are substituted for pesticides. However, implementation of IPM practices will increase some information-gathering costs, such as labor costs for scouting. IPM adoption may influence returns via price premiums or changes in yields.

"Adopters spent less on chemicals and chemical applications and spent more on scouting and trapping when compared with non-adopters," Beddow said. "Overall, adopters in the sample spent $100 less than non-adopters per acre of sweet corn. Assuming a constant price of $2.25 per dozen ears, per-acre total revenue for adopters in the sample was $279 greater than that of non-adopters. The difference in net revenue between adopters and non-adopters was $295."

Beddow's research can be viewed on the Web at http://scholar.lib.vt.edu//theses available/etd-09272000-14340016/.

Plant Germplasm Center Steadily Builds Collection

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Ohio State University Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center has come a long way since its grand opening a little more than a year ago.

The center, whose main purpose is to save, assess and promote the use of ornamental plant germplasm for industry and researcher use, is home to over 1,100 accessions from 62 genera, and the list continues to grow.

"Our primary function is to conserve, evaluate and distribute germplasm that would be important to the researcher or to the industry," said David Lay, director of the Ornamental Plant Germplasm Center. "It all goes back to conserving a plant species because you don't know where the next cure for cancer will come from. We need to take advantage of plants that have traits like disease resistance, stress tolerance, or carry pharmaceutical and neutraceutical compounds."

Germplasm is currently being collected from the following priority genera: Aglaonema, Alstroemeria, Anthurium, Aquilegia, Aster, Baptista, Begonia, Campanula, Chrysanthemum, Dianthus, Dieffenbacha, Euphorbia, Geranium, Hemerocallis, Impatiens, Iris, Lilium, Narcissus, Pelargonium, Petunia, Phalaenopsis, Philodendron, Phlox, Rudbeckia, Salvia, Spathiphyllum, Tagetes, Verbena, Veronica and Viola.

Researchers at the center are using insects, mainly honeybees and bumblebees, as pollination tools to aid in their germplasm collection. The insects, said curator Susan Stieve, are quicker and more efficient than hand pollination, and also allow year-round germplasm seed production in the greenhouse.

"Hand pollination takes time and is expensive, but honeybees are cheap at $40 a colony. An average colony holds 20,000 bees and they can work for several weeks pollinating as long as there are flowers available," said Stieve. "They are also perennial, which means they can overwinter and live year to year."

One drawback Stieve has found working with honeybees is that the insects tend to dislike restricted areas, such as greenhouses.

Bumblebees, on the other hand, are content to working in contained spaces. But they are more expensive ($100 for a colony of 75-100 bees) and they only live for three to four months.

Lancaster DHIA Celebrates 10 Years Of Growth

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

SMOKETOWN (Lancaster Co.) — The continued growth of Lancaster DHIA is an exception to the trend found in dairy herd improvement associations across the country, according to Steve Hershey, president.

Officers at Lancaster DHIA's annual banquet in Smoketown on Tuesday reported 146,483 cows on test, an 11 percent increase from last year and about three times as many cows as the organization serviced when it first started in 1992.

"That is not normal for DHIA affiliates in America," Hershey said. He reported seeing lackluster growth and depressed working environments in his visits to affiliates in other areas.

At Lancaster DHIA, however, "From top to bottom, the attitude is positive," Hershey said.

This year, 211 new herds signed up for service, making a total of 2,350 herds in 24 counties in Pennsylvania and counties in Maryland and several other neighboring states. New testing circuits were begun in Bradford and Bedford counties.

In another highlight of the year, Jay Mylin, Lancaster DHIA manager, was named winner of the Martin A. Wilson Management Award.

Presented by the National DHIA last March, the award recognized Mylin's excellence in managing Lancaster DHIA through its first decade.

Mylin praised the team of 44 DHIA technicians as well as dairy farmers, Lancaster DHIA's "loyal customers," for their contribution to the success of the organization.

"There is one core value that we come back to, and that is relationships," Mylin said.

John Clay, director of Dairy Record Management Service (DRMS), the company based in Raleigh, N.C. that manages Lancaster DHIA's herd records, was featured speaker for the day. He called Lancaster DHIA a "model" of commitment to its farmers.

"I'm not aware of a service affiliate that takes a more aggressive approach to educating its members," he said.

One innovation available to members in recent years is the Pocket Dairy handheld computer, along with the PC Dart dairy herd management system.

Clay noted that Lancaster DHIA was the the fastest DRMS affiliate in turnaround time from the date when cows are tested to when the data is mailed, and within the top three affiliates for laboratory turnaround time.

Lancaster DHIA also honored Glenn Shirk, recently retired Lancaster County dairy agent, for his close work with Lancaster DHIA from even before its official beginning in 1992 to the present.

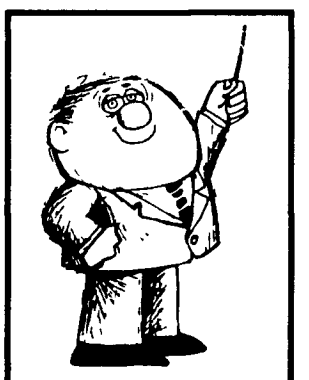
"You have what you enjoy now because of the efforts of the (reorganization) team," Shirk said. "It did not come without a a lot of effort and a lot of alliances."

Top production herd awards by breed were named as follows:

- Holstein: Marvin Stoltzfus, Leola, 33,698 pounds milk, and top protein at 961 pounds.
- Jersey: Tol-Je-So Farm 1, Port Deposit, Md., 20,047 pounds milk.
- Brown Swiss: Jobo Holstein Farm, Gettysburg, 21,592 pounds milk.
- Ayrshire: Don and Pam Gable, Elverson, 19,715 pounds milk.
- Guernsey: Millie and Jim Widmann, Kirkwood. 18,236 pounds milk.

John Clay, director of Dairy Records Management Service, Raleigh, N.C., praises the Lancaster DHIA for its high level of service.

- Low SCC herd award went to Gary and Jenny Bowman, Quarryville, for a somatic cell count of 60,000.



A lesson well learned...

First Texas Longhorn Show Conducted At KILE

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Another keynote for the history books occurred at the 46th annual Keystone International Livestock Exposition as the Texas Longhorn breed entered the small arena of the Pennsylvania Farm Show Complex in Harrisburg.

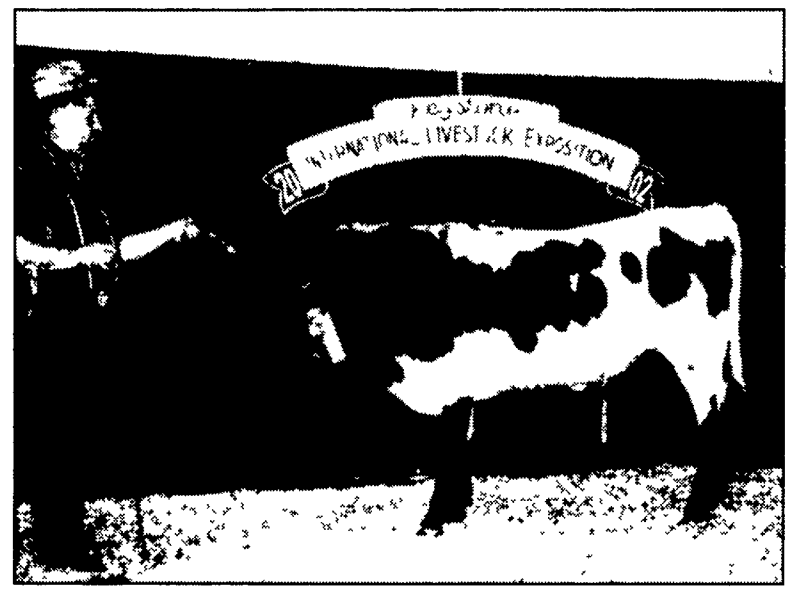
In the female Texas Longhorn classes, Willard Edgar Sr. of Smithsburg, Md., exhibited the grand champion female, Tiptoe's Oklahoma Cowgirl. The reserve grand champion female was the entry exhibited by Damon and Lizz Huntzberry of Smithsburg, Md.

Shadow Pomp owned by Damon and Lizz Huntzberry of Smithsburg, Md., took home the grand champion bull. Entering the winner's circle in the bull Texas Longhorn competition was Cole Huntzberry's Vindicator of Smithsburg, Md., for the reserve grand champion bull.

The Texas Longhorn Show was conducted in conjunction with the Keystone International Livestock Exposition, which was Oct. 1-7 at the Pennsylvania Farm Show, Harrisburg. This year, the Keystone International Livestock Exposition had a record 5,056 horses, beef cattle, sheep, and swine from 28 states and four Canadian provinces. To better serve agricultural expositions such as KILE, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture initiated an $86 million investment in a landmark construction project at its Farm Show Complex. Also, the Department of Agriculture has dedicated new and additional financial resources to KILE.

For more information on KILE, contact the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture at its Farm Show Complex at (717) 787-2905 or visit the Department's Website at www.pda.state.pa.us.

Damon and Lizz Huntzberry, Smithsburg, exhibited the champion Longhorn bull in the open breeding cattle show.



Randy Sutton, Blue Ridge Summit, showed the champion junior steer in the Longhorn open breeding cattle show.

Stakeholders Recognize Dairy Producers With Pacesetter Awards

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Three dairy operations were recognized with Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders Pacesetter Awards at the organization's annual meeting Thursday.Hilecrest Farms, Vista Grande Farms, and Herman Brubaker received the awards, which honor dairy producers who portray a positive image of the dairy industry and work to establish a viable future for the industry.

Dave and Janet Hileman, Tyrone, Blair County, operate Hilecrest Farms, a 450-cow operation In addition, Dave is the president of the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania (PDMP). The Hilemans have also worked to incorporate Hispanic labor into their operation.

'Dave is always willing to ask if there is a better, faster, cheaper, more efficient way to get things done," said Ralph Heffner Pacesetter awards committee chair. "If there is, he'll find it" and share his experience with others, said Heffner.

Vista Grande Farm, Fleetwood, Berks County, is owned by David and Phoebe Bitler, a 100-cow operation. They are working on combining more than 600 acres of cropland with their neighbors, which will allow the couple to focus more closely on the dairy aspect of their farm business.

Phoebe has been active in public speaking for agriculture and serves in leadership roles of several agricultural organizations. David sells registered breeding bulls and is treasurer of the Pennsylvania Holstein Association.

The couple also organize and sponsor several bus tours, such as to the World Dairy Expo, and host an agricultural focus tour each year.

Herman Brubaker operates a 70-cow dairy in West Alexandria, Ohio. He leads Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) and spearheaded the effort to develop single-serve, recyclable plastic milk containers. Brubaker also supported development of flavored milk products to compete with other single-serve beverages.

Prior to those accomplishments, he led the industry in legislation supporting the dairy industry, encouraging and overseeing the unification of regional dairy organizations into Dairy Management, Inc. (DMI), a national program. Brubaker is board chair of DMI.

Pacesetter Award nominations are accepted throughout the year and are due Oct. 1, 2003. Contact Michelle Jaymes-Parks at (717) 948-6609 for nomination forms.

Also during the annual meeting, Allyn Lamb gave a treasurer's report and two incumbent and two new board members were elected to the organization's board.

President Chuck Cruickshank gave a synopsis of the past year's activities of the organization. In April, Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders sponsored an economic task force meeting that pooled the ideas of 25 industry representatives to set goals to be achieved by 2005.

Part of the organization's goals is an online dairy resource planning guide (dairydevelopment.psu.edu), a checklist and directory of service providers for dairy operations.

The organization also sponsors advocacy groups to carry the message of the industry, and has been "very involved in legislative activity," according to Cruickshank.

The Business Planning Assistance Program (BPAP) has already given grants to 37 producers for planning assistance.

During the meeting, Samuel Hayes, agriculture secretary, phoned in from Puerto Rico to tell the 200 attendees of the "Export for Scholars" program under way. The students and state FFA officers took bred heifers, Dorset sheep, and Charolais bulls for the trade mission experience. Julie Flinchbaugh, York, a state FFA officer, also gave a few comments.

During the meeting, Deputy Secretary Russell Redding was honored for his help in developing the Stakeholder organization, an effort which has been "personally rewarding," according to Redding.

Loan Program Assists Next Generation Of Pennsylvania Farmers

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes recently announced that funding is available to eligible farmers through the Next Generation Farmer Loan Program.

This collaborative effort, sponsored by the departments of Agriculture and Community and Economic Development, helps finance agricultural endeavors that will strengthen Pennsylvania farm communities for years to come.

"The unique partnership we have developed among farmers, lenders and county economic-development agencies will help the next generation of farmers and their families begin and preserve our farm business enterprises," Secretary Hayes said.

To assist eligible farmers, federal tax-exempt mortgage financing is used to reduce a farmer's interest rate for capital purchases. The Next Generation Farmer Loan may be used between a borrower and a lender for a loan to make a direct purchase of a farm and agricultural machinery and equipment or between a buyer and seller for a contract purchase. Through the Next Generation Farmer Loan Program, interest is exempt from federal, state and county taxes.

Assistance is limited to amounts and terms determined by the lender and contract seller.

Eligible candidates must meet the following guidelines:

• Credit Quality — The applicant must meet the lender's credit standards;

• Residency — The applicant must be a permanent resident of Pennsylvania when the loan is issued;

• Age — The applicant must be at least 18 years old when the loan application is submitted;

• Capital Requirements — The applicant will be required to document to the satisfaction of the lender that they will have access to adequate working capital, farm equipment and livestock, if appropriate;

• Ownership and Active Participation — The owner must be the sole owner and principal user of the project; and

• Prior Ownership — The applicant must not have had any prior ownership interest in a substantial amount of land.

A substantial amount of land is a parcel, which exceeds 30 percent of the median farm size in the country in which the land is located, or which had at any time during ownership a fair market value in excess of $125,000. The maximum amount of the loan under this program is $250,000.

For more information or to receive an application for assistance contact your local economic development agency and/or agricultural lender or contact the state Department of Agriculture at (717) 787-6041.

LAST YEAR	2751	1602

Compared to last week, slaughter steers sold firm to 1 00 higher to open the week, trending 1 00 to instances 2 00 lower late in the week The early week supply included some fancy stock, although the Yield Grade 4's were definitely on the rise, but due to the light run buyers were not overly selective on the finish However, on a run that included nearly 600 head of steers on Thursday, buyers made it clear that they would procure the 4's, but at a discount Also, with the February live cattle contract at the CME closing at 77 35 on Thursday, many buyers are currently not willing to pay 77 00-79 00 for steers until the market gets some direction back in it It was only last week that futures prices were in the upper 78 00 range and on the rise, what a difference a week makes However, remember that around this time a year ago Choice steers were averaging around 67 00 in Lancaster County After advancing 10 00 over the past nine weeks, the direct feed yards out West are moving their steers at mostly 73 00 as of Thursday night, which is 1 00 lower than last week Holstein steers sold steady to 50 higher this week, with several very well finished steers in the mix Slaughter heifers remain in tight supply, although they ended the week around steady to week on light tests Slaughter cows kicked off the week trading weak to 1 00 lower, however any losses early were erased late in the week as cows trended steady to 1 00 higher This week's cow supply included nearly 1150 head that went to slaughter Needless to say, cow supplies are still ample Slaughter bulls sold with a lower undertone early in the week, trending steady to 3 00 higher late in the week on a run that included almost 100 head The total cattle receipts listed above include a special feeder run that added 322 head to the total Also, receipts were higher this week as late last week a winter storm moved into the area hindering the movement of livestock This week's reported supply included 28 percent steers, 5 percent heifers, 42 percent cows, 7 percent bulls, with the balance feeders

Researcher Looks For Test To Detect Scrapie, Other TSEs

WOOSTER, Ohio — Counting sheep is supposed to help us have a good night sleep. But Ohio sheep farmers whose flocks have been infected with scrapie know that sweet dreams can easily turn into nightmares.

Between Oct. 1, 2001, and July 31, 2002, Ohio — which boasts 142,000 head of sheep with a value of $19.8 million- reported the highest number of confirmed cases of scrapie (38) and infected flocks (13) in the country, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

That's why Srinand Sreevatsan, a researcher with Ohio State University's Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center (OARDC), is developing a test that can detect scrapie and other transmissible spongiform encephalopathies (TSEs) — including bovine spongiform encephalopathy (BSE, or mad cow disease) in cattle, chronic wasting disease (CWD) in elk and deer, and Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease (CJD) in humans- using scrapie as a model.

"There is a desperate need for a fast and reliable test for the diagnosis of TSEs in live animals," said Sreevatsan, whose laboratory is part of OARDC's Food Animal Health Research Program (FAHRP). "Early detection could lead to efficient surveillance systems that may avert or control this group of diseases."

Scrapie is a fatal, degenerative disease that affects the central nervous system of sheep and goats. It was inadvertently introduced into the United States from Europe in 1947. Since then, USDA has reported more than 1,600 confirmed scrapie cases in sheep and 10 cases in goats. There is no cure for scrapie, and death is inevitable once the disease is contracted.

The agent responsible for scrapie and other TSEs is smaller than the smallest known virus. It's generally believed to be a prion the abnormal form (PrPsc) of a normal host protein (PrP) that accumulates in the affected brain. How prions kill nerve cells in the brain and lead to serious degerative diseases is still a puzzle. However, Ohio State University researchers recently discovered that PrPsc is able to spontaneously form within the cell's cytosol. Once there, it can convert normal PrP into PrPsc, aiding in the destruction of host nerve cells and helping the disease to spread from cell to cell.

Sreevatsan is looking for a way to identify prions through clinical samples (blood, serum, tonsil scrapings or cerebrospinal fluid) before the onset of symptoms, which usually occurs two to five years after the animal is infected. Although some tests have been developed in the past, definite diagnosis of scrapie is still only possible after death.

"The idea is to detect the prion protein, which is folded abnormally as compared to its normal counterpart, in an animal that's still living, using non-invasive approaches," Sreevatsan explained. "Identifying infected animals early on will be profitable for the farmers, and it will also be very useful in getting rid of infected animals. Anything that will help both the farmers and public health in general, by preventing a spillover of potentially infected meat or meat products into the food chain, will benefit the animal industry a lot."

Scrapie-infected animals tend to itch and pull out their wool (a scraping action that gives the disease its name), eat but remain thin, bunny hop, step high with their front feet, rub on objects, bite at their legs, smack their lips, wobble or stumble, shake, and stare up at the sky, among other symptoms.

"Not much attention has been paid to the economics of this particular problem," Sreevatsan said. "However, it is anticipated that TSEs (CWD and scrapie) will have a significant impact on meat consumption and the acceptability of the carcass. because animals that are infected usually mutilate themselves and are not acceptable for sale."

Decline in meat sales is not the only damage caused by scrapie to the U.S. sheep industry. The presence of the disease here also prevents the export of breeding stock, semen and embryos to many other countries. In addition, TSEs in general are the subject of increased public attention and concern because of the catastrophic effects of mad cow disease in Great Britain and the link between BSE and variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob Disease (vCJD) in people.

According to Sreevatsan, an accurate prion-detection test could also be used to diagnose other TSEs in domestic and wild animals, as well as in humans. The need for such a test is exemplified by concerns regarding the occurrence of CJD in over 30 professional blood donors and the possibility of a mad cow outbreak in the United States.

"Potentially, we could be able to apply the test to detect the prion protein in other animals and humans," Sreevatsan said. "What is of foremost importance now is to find a tool or a set of tools to identify any infected animals and prevent these diseases from getting to people."

Also involved in the prion test project at Sreevatsan's laboratory are Kaori Takemura, an OARDC postdoctoral researcher, and Katie Ringer, a senior neuroscience student at The College of Wooster.

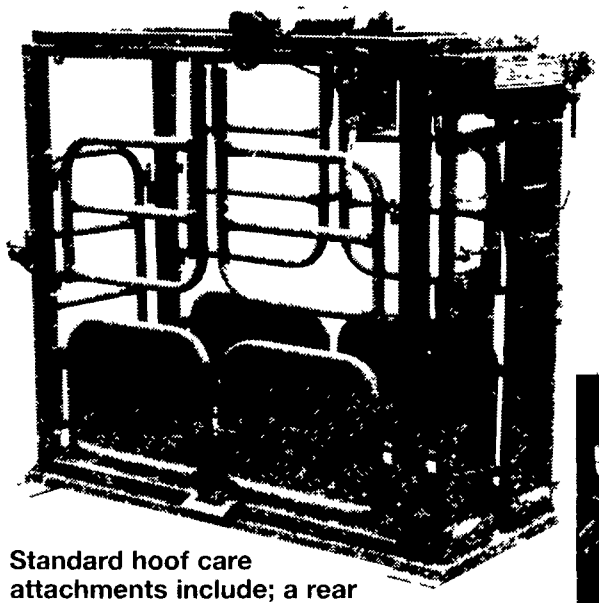
Combination Hoof Care/Vet Chute

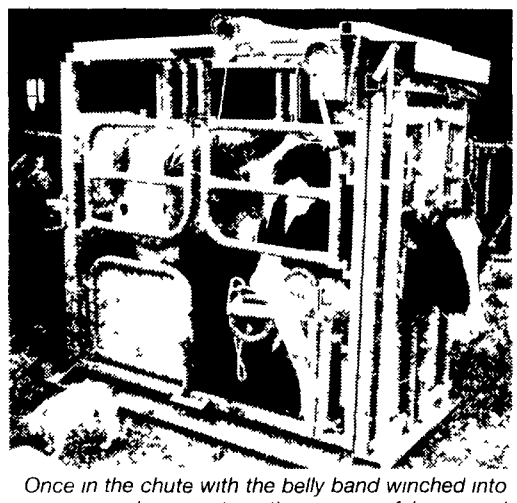


This highly versatile equipment can be used to secure a cow safely and efficiently for foot care or veterinary services.

Side panels and gates easily replace hoof care accessories to create a vet chute where almost any common vet procedure can be performed.

Standard hoof care attachments include; a rear splatter board, rear foot winch, two front foot winches and a full width belly band and winch to lift the animals weight off their feet. All winches have heavy duty friction brakes providing constant, positive holding action.

ALL STEEL PARTS ARE POWDER COATED USING THE PBZ FIVE-STEP PROCESS.



Once in the chute with the belly band winched into working position, the cow is safely secured for foot treatment

Soybean Checkoff Launches New Soy Biodiesel Promotion

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — As the second-largest U.S. user group of diesel fuel, U.S. farmers have the power to significantly grow the market for soy biodiesel as long as they ask their fuel suppliers for it. With the help of the soybean checkoff, farmers will soon begin increasing their requests.

The United Soybean Board (USB) launched a major checkoff-funded initiative to encourage U.S. soybean farmers to request and use soy biodiesel. Nine states and one region of states will conduct activities such as meetings with farmers and fuel suppliers and communications campaigns to increase the utilization of soy biodiesel within the farming sector.

"This checkoff-funded effort is a combined state and national commitment to see that the demand for soy biodiesel increases," said David Durham, the newly elected USB chairman and a soybean farmer from Hardin, Mo. "With so many soybean checkoff entities working together, we have the ability to bring soybean farmers an important message that can ultimately increase soybean demand."

The biodiesel promotion efforts are a part of a larger checkoff-funded Biobased Products Initiative (BPI). USB created the BPI to promote the use of soy-based products and soy biodiesel. A recent survey conducted by USB showed that 82 percent of soybean producers feel it is somewhat to very important that the soybean checkoff focus its efforts on increasing consumption of biodiesel.

Soy biodiesel is a cleaner burning, domestically-produced fuel made from soybean oil that offers exceptional engine lubricity, extended equipment life and environmental benefits. Soy biodiesel increases lubricity by up to 66 percent compared to number two diesel and helps to improve engine performance.It also reduces wear and extends the life of fuel injectors and pumps.

In addition, studies by the Environmental Protection Agency show that biodiesel can reduce emissions of particulate matter by 47 percent when compared with petroleum diesel in unmodified diesel engines. Soy biodiesel is the only alternative fuel to have fully completed the health-effects testing requirements of the federal Clean Air Act.

The latest U.S. Department of Energy figures show farm use of diesel fuel is 3.2 billion gallons/year. If every soybean farmer used a B2 blend of soy biodiesel (two percent soy biodiesel and 98 percent petroleum diesel), roughly 63.4 million gallons of pure biodiesel or the equivalent of 42 million bushels of soybeans, would be used annually.

"Once use of soy biodiesel rises, the potential for U.S. soybean farmers is quite amazing," said Durham. "But we must ask for it. And we have to use it."

Another goal of the BPI is to promote greater federal use of the more than 40 categories of soy biobased products currently available in the marketplace. The 2002 Farm Bill includes new incentives for federal agencies to purchase biobased products made from soybeans and other agricultural commodities, making this portion of the BPI especially timely.

Ohio Extension Field Guide Receives Award

COLUMBUS, Ohio — An Ohio State University Extension publication has been recognized by the American Society of Agronomy for its excellence as educational material.

The Corn, Soybean, Wheat and Alfalfa Field Guide a pocket guide that details crop management, weed, insect and disease control, and fertilizer and harvest recommendations recently received a certificate of excellence in the organization's A-4 Educational Materials competition.

Bruce Eisley, an Ohio State University entomologist who spearheaded the development of the field guide, said the publication is intended to provide growers, Extension agents and consultants quick reference information when scouting crops in the field.

"The field guide has reference material about weeds, insects, diseases, herbicides, no-till. If you see something in the field that doesn't look right, you can pull the book out and figure out what's going on," said Eisley. "The guide should be valuable for anyone that scouts fields on a regular basis."

The 239-page pocket guide contains everything from diagrams, graphs and charts to calibration and conversion formulas to a phone listing of Ohio State Extension agents to color photos — a new feature added to the guide this year.

The field guide is available through county extension offices for $4.50 and is also available on Ohioline at http://ohioline.osu.edu, Bulletin No. 827.

MONITORING BUSINESS PERFORMANCE

Bradley J. Hilty
Information Management Specialist
Penn State Dairy Alliance

With the turn of the new year quickly approaching, dairy producers are looking forward to putting this challenging year behind them and looking forward to better times ahead.

Yet the challenging times most producers faced in 2002 can represent an opportunity to evaluate how the business performed in less than desirable economic conditions. Milk prices in four of the past six years have been at or near record high levels. Managing a dairy business when prices are in the range of $15 to $16 per hundred pounds of milk is certainly less challenging than in the current price environment. Conducting a business analysis in good economic conditions can mask possible weaknesses of the business and distort the owner's perception of the need to take corrective action.

Participating in a dairy business analysis and benchmarking program can help producers determine where opportunities to improve business performance may exist. In recent years, Penn State University has formed an alliance with Cornell University to bring the Dairy Farm Business Analysis program to Pennsylvania producers. This program has provided feedback to New York's dairy producers for many decades.

The program provides producers with a comprehensive view of how their business is performing. By examining key benchmarks, such as return on assets, operating expense ratio, asset turnover ratio, percent equity and term debt and lease coverage ratio, the Dairy Farm Business Analysis can help producers answer five key questions they must answer in conducting an annual business analysis. Those questions are:

1. Is the business profitable? (Is it generating acceptable returns to the resources allocated to it?)
2. Is the business financially efficient? (Is it efficient in spending money to produce a product?)
3. Is the business capital efficient? (Is the business utilizing capital assets efficiently?)
4. Is the business on sound financial footing?
5. Is the business able to meet its financial obligations?

If the answers to any of these questions is "no," the Dairy Farm Business Analysis can provide insight as to why by examining more detail oriented benchmarks, such as labor efficiency, production efficiency and cost control indicators. Producers can compare their indicators to benchmarks developed from all the farms that participate in the program to see how they rate in key performance areas.

The Dairy Farm Business Analysis program is an essential component of the Busines$ense program offered by Penn State's Dairy Alliance team. Producers who participate in the Busines$ense program have the opportunity to learn best management practices in business and information management in a hands-on and interactive learning environment. The group discussion session provide producers with an opportunity to learn from each other as well as the instructors. Conducting a dairy farm business analysis and discussing management practices that enhance business performance with fellow producers are two important best management practices that can help dairy producers operate competitively, even in a tight economic environment.

Busines$ense sessions have been scheduled for numerous locations around the state this winter. To learn more about this program, producers can e-mail Brad Hilty, information management specialist with the Dairy Alliance program, at bhilty@psu.edu or call the Dairy Alliance office at (888) 373-PADA.

USDA To Measure Pa. Sheep Inventory

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — In January 2002, the total number of sheep and lambs in Pennsylvania was estimated at 86,000 head, up six percent form January 2001. Total breeding sheep and lambs were estimated at 73,000 head and total market sheep were at 13,000 head.

The total lamb crop for 2001, at 71,000 head, had been up 1,000 head from the 2000 crop.

USDA's January Sheep Report Survey is the only chance to officially measure the entire sheep industry in Pennsylvania and the U.S. in 2003. Approximately 300 sheep producers will be contacted in the state of Pennsylvania and about 14,000 operators in the U.S. will be contacted.

In mid to late December, Pennsylvania sheep operations will receive questionnaires in the mail. In late December and early January, respondents will be contacted by an enumerator either by telephone or personal interview.

As with all surveys conducted by the National Agricultural Statistics Service (NASS), by federal law, survey data is kept confidential. Names, addresses, and information about individual operations are considered private information and are exempt from disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act. Data on individual operations cannot be released to the public or to any other local, state, or national government agency under any circumstances.

National survey results will be released from Washington, D.C. at 3 p.m. on Jan. 31. All reports are available on the Internet within minutes of the scheduled release time at www.usda.gov/nass/.

Featured Recipe

Christmas and cookie baking go hand in hand for many families. In addition to traditional favorites, cookies can be made in novel ways, for instance — cookies made with crushed potato chips in the recipe sent in by Dana Strohmeyer, Albrightsville.

Here's a recipe with a surprise tucked into the middle of the cookie.

For more holiday recipes, decorating, gift ideas, and family fun activities check out the Website www.marsbrightideas.com/baking.

SANTA'S SURPRISES

1 cup butter, softened
1 cup creamy peanut butter
1 cup light brown sugar
1 cup granulated sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
3½ cups all-purpose flour (sifted)
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 bag Snickers miniatures
Powdered sugar
1 bag Dove Milk or Dark Chocolate Gifts, optional

Combine butter, peanut butter, and sugars using a mixer on medium to low speed until light and fluffy.

Slowly add eggs and vanilla until thoroughly combined. Then mix in flour, salt, and baking soda.

Cover and chill dough for 2-3 hours.

Unwrap each miniature.

Remove dough from refrigerator. Divide into 1 tablespoon pieces and flatten.

Place one miniature in the center of each piece of dough.

Form dough into a ball around each miniature.

Place on greased cookie sheet and bake at 325 degrees for 10-12 minutes. (Baking time and temperature need to be adjusted if using more than 1 tablespoon dough per cookie).

Let cookies cool on baking rack or waxed paper. Sift powdered sugar on top of cookies.

Holiday hint: Spruce up Santa's surprise by drizzling melted Milk or Dark Chocolate Gifts over each cookie. Recipe can also be made with 1 batch prepared cookie dough.

Quick, what's a four-letter word for something that will instantly stir up the holiday spirit?

Why, S-N-O-W, of course.

True, you might consider snow a "four-letter-word" of a different type if you got stuck in it, slammed into something hard with your body or your vehicle from skidding on it, or had to dig your car out from beneath a 10-inch layer of it (speaking from personal experience, here) at well past midnight in an airport parking lot.

Despite such human inconveniences, our extremely early, deep blanket of white transformed the countryside from the boring-blah-brown of late fall to the exquisite, fairyland shimmer of a glittery holiday card.

What better way for some of us to be nudged (booted, maybe?) into the seasonal mood!

Gone was the frost-wizened green of the hay and grain fields, laced by field roads dusty and rutted by the multi-daily passing of tractor and feed wagon. Gone was the brown — really hard surface of the ponds, frozen so early in the season that dust stirred by the manure hauling rig had settled on the ice, lending it a distinctly dirty look.

Gone was the scruffiness of the back yard, littered with fallen leaves of the maple trees blown into corners and borders. Gone was the untidy look of the flower borders, where late rose blossoms had freeze-dried on jagged stalks and heavy sunflower stems leaned at rakish angles.

Gone were the bits of limbs and twigs scattered about the ground by a relentless wind of just a few days earlier. Gone were the cats curled up at sheltered sunny spots in corners of buildings. Gone were the assorted bones dragged about the yard and left lay where Derra Dog had last chewed on them.

Instead, a pristine, peaceful look spread across the countryside and stretched out over our rolling hills of fields and pasture. Every limb of willow and maple, oak and hickory was highlighted with an accent of white against the dark shades of bark. Our tall, old backyard Norway spruce gleamed like a frosted Christmas tree, with snow daintily capping each feathery branch.

Ordinary fenceposts sported jaunty white hats and dried foxtail heads more resembled delicate, curving lace. A rounded, white cap had transformed the backyard birdbath into a whimsical, oversized forest mushroom, lacking only an oversized, giant toad sitting beneath it.

Our usual daily visitors at the birdfeeders increased several fold as snow buried nature's food pantry. Along with the everyday diners of titmice, nuthatches and chickadees descended woodpeckers, downy and red-bellied, noisy blue jays, doves, finches and our stunningly-beautiful cardinals, the male in classic Christmas red, his more somber mate in subdued tones offset with her glow-orange beak.

Frozen fringe added a whimsical edging to the barn roofs, the sparkling icicles stretching downward as midday sunshine oozed snowmelt down the metal roof. With those drips refreezing on the sword tips at sundown, the icy blades lengthened by the hour, and in a few days, reached the ground.

With this early start of icy moisture, by winter's end we may all consider snow a nasty word and be ready to embrace the four-letter one that kept us sweating for weeks last summer...H-E-A-T.

Maybe we'll have a white Christmas this year.

Connecting The Generations

How many of you ponder over the perfect gift to give parents or grandparents? How do you help a child pick the right gift to give their grandparents or what do you as a grandparent, give your grandchild for the holidays? It is that time of year for both younger and older people to be thinking about buying gifts for loved ones.

In our household we try to reinforce the fact that it is not the value or size of a gift that counts but the thoughts that are behind it. Gifts that have a part of the giver invested in the gift mean more to most receivers than some store bought, high priced item. This year our nine-year-old is painting unfinished picture frames to give to her grandmothers. Yes, it means messy paint and paint brushes, some spilled paint on her shirt and newspapers strewn across the table but the gift will mean more than a store bought frame. In giving this gift, Katrina will be giving a part of herself and her talents.

In the midst of all the holiday excitement, we often barely notice that a dilemma has crept into the world of gift-giving; we have increasingly less time and live farther apart. This has a profound impact on all facets of our social lives, not just choosing gifts. Even under the same roof, family members are spending less time together. This raises concerns about family cohesion, particularly between the young and old.

"Intergenerational studies" literature provides many useful clues for how to re-connect the generations. One principle emphasizes activities that tie into what people-no matter what their age-have in common. Activities such as eating, talking, singing, dancing and craft making work well to re-connect the generations.

The question remains, "What kinds of gifts most readily lead to quality time spent between older and younger family members (or friends)?

If we view a gift item as an opportunity to enter into the rhymes and rhythms of a loved one's life experiences, the quest for the perfect gift becomes a search for ways to share time and build relationships. The gift is seen less as a product and more as a vehicle for bringing people together across geographical and generational distances.

Generations that are separated by distance can still be connected. Have you ever thought of sending a grandchild a storybook and tape with you as the narrator?

Simply make your own with a blank tape, using a bell or tap on a glass for the page turning signal. Adding your own goodnight message at the end could add a special touch to this special gift.

Some other gift giving ideas that older adults and young people can give each other as well as gifts they can develop together for others include:

- A family recipe and time to make it together.
- Hand down a hobby, such as wood carving, sewing or coin collecting.
- Seeds for a garden you can plant together.
- A family heirloom and the story (written or taped) that goes with the heirloom.
- A package of supplies to make a family history book together.

The list could go on and on, but remember that the essence of the great gift is that it helps us locate the 'we' not the 'me' in giving. Let's use the holiday season as a time to journey beyond our private worlds and feel—and be—closer to our loved ones.

Ephrata Cloister Lantern Tours Put Brothers On Trial

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Ben Franklin once said the only sure things in life are death and taxes. In 1737 the Brothers of the Ephrata Cloister tried to test the need for taxes by refusing to pay. The result was some time in the county jail, and a trial.

This Christmas season, the Ephrata Cloister will recreate that episode in history with the annual Christmas Lantern Tours offered at the historic site on Dec. 26, 27, 28, and 29 starting every half-hour from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. Reservations are required for these special tours, and can be made by calling the Ephrata Cloister Visitor Center during business hours at (717) 733-6600, ext. 3001.

The Ephrata Cloister is located in the Borough of Ephrata at 632 West Main Street (Route 322) at the intersection with Route 272. Admission is $7 for adults, $6.50 for senior citizens, and $5 for youth ages 6-17. For more information, or persons with disabilities who need special assistance or accommodation should call (717) 733-6600 in advance to discuss their needs. Pennsylvania TDD relay service is available at (800) 654-5984.

The "Stream Map of Pennsylvania" was completed in 1965 after a 30 year effort by Howard Higbee, a former Penn State Professor

Professor Higbee succeeded in creating a map of the highest detail possible a map that shows every stream and lake He painstakingly plotted by hand, the location of 45,000 miles of streams onto a 3 by 5 foot map

The map sold extremely well - until it was lost several years later Incredibly, the printer entrusted with the original drawing and printing plates declared bankruptcy, then carelessly hauled Higbee's 30 years of work to the landfill

The few remaining dog-eared copies became a prized fisherman's possession Professor Higbee was offered $400 for one of his last maps And state agencies were forced to keep their copies under lock and key

The experts had always told Professor Higbee that reprints were impossible, because the maps were printed in non-photographic blue

Then, in 1991, at the age of 91, Howard Higbee's dream came true Computers made it possible to reprint the map Holding an updated map Howard said, 'I never thought I'd live to see this day'

Then by combining Professor Higbee's knowledge with computer technology -- the STREAM MAP OF OHIO was created

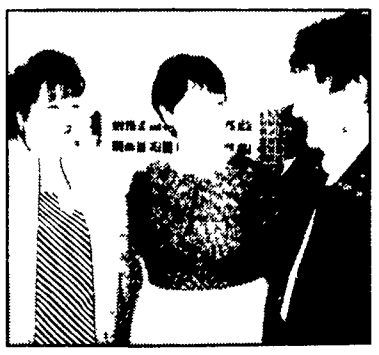
Learn To Reduce Holiday Stress



Over time, stress can affect you physically and emotionally," said Sharon Czabafy, center, Wellness coordinator for Reading Hospital. Left is Sue Gichero and Fay Strickler, right, during the holiday program presented by Berks County Extension recently.

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — People deal with stress in many different ways. Nina Redding, Adams County family living agent, blows bubbles.

She recommends keeping a bottle of bubbles beneath the driver's car seat. "When stopped in traffic, wind down your window, blow bubbles, and watch them drift across the cars," she said during a recent workshop on stress management.

Redding shared a few other humorous ways of dealing with stress.

"Live in the moment," she said. She demonstrated this concept by sweeping the floor. "See how smooth this broom handle is, how it fits so nicely in my hand, how clean it sweeps....," she murmured as she swayed to the rhythm of sweeping.

"You laugh," Redding said of the audience's reaction. "But try it." She believes paying attention to the moment keeps one from worrying about the past and the future.

Redding believes that stress comes from four main sources: environment with its pollution, noise, and adverse weather, finances; time schedules, and thoughts.

Redding recommends writing down everything that needs to be done.

"Get it off your mind," she said of lessening the load to remember everything.

Stress doesn't need to put a damper on the holiday season.

Gail Carlson, health education specialist with the Univeristy of Missouri-Columbia, said that stress can be caused by a pile up of little things — even things we enjoy such as visiting with friends, family, wrapping gifts, preparing food, decorating the house, and other things that keep us busy during the holidays.

Sharon Czabafy, wellness coordinator for Reading Hospital, said there is a difference between chronic stress and occasional stress.

"Stess affects you physically and emotionally," she said. In addition to too much to do, eating too much or the wrong types of food, and drinking lots of caffeine can cause stress.

Here are some tips to help with dealing with stress.

• "Don't try to make this holiday the best ever. Make a list and prioritize the most important activities. Be realistic about what you can do and cannot do," Carlson said

• Get organized: Make a list of everything that needs to be done, from shopping to entertaining, to decorating.

• Share the workload Delegate things to family members and even to friends

• Be realistic in expectations of self and of others.

• Establish a budget and stick to it. Remember to include the cost of preparing special holiday foods when calculating the extra expense. • Drink plenty of water. Eat healthy. Stay rested.

• Find time for yourself Don t spend all your time providing activities for your family and friends

If all the above steps fail do what Redding did. Don a purple wig, a pink housecoat, red apron, and slippers, and blow bubbles

Blowing bubbles is one way of dealing with too much to do. During a workshop at the Lebanon County Extension holiday program, Nina Redding, Adams County family agent, recommends a humorous approach to coping with stress.

Give The Gift Of American-Made Cheese

PHILADELPHIA — Searching for the perfect gift this holiday season? Look no further! Give family and friends the gift that brings cheer to every festive occasion...cheese! Americans love to fill the holidays with cheese and why not do it with American-made cow's milk cheeses?

Over the last 10 years, handcrafted American artisanal cheeses have flourished on the international scene, redefining "American" cheese and winning worldwide acclaim for quality and taste. With U.S cow's milk cheeses riding a wave of popularity, they make a perfect gift this season.

The selection is large with more than 300 varieties of delicious cheeses produced in every state except Alaska Varieties range from zesty Blue, sharp Cheddar and locally made flavors of Colby from Eve's Cheese in Chestertown, Md., to European-style cheeses developed from old-country recipes, such as mellow Gouda and smooth Gruyere. Philadelphia's own Mancuso and Son's rich handmade ricotta, as well as their semi-soft fresh and aged Mozzarella and Scamorze are local favorites.

Personalized gift baskets that include gourmet foods such as these American-made cheeses are the latest trend. Artisanal and hand-crafted gifts are the up-and-coming movement in the gourmet segment. Gift baskets represent a sense of comfort and family, so what better way to provide "homesteading," than with America's favorite comfort food — cheese!

Make holiday get-togethers fun — sample pairings with a printer-friendly "Cheese and Wine Tasting Kit" available on www.ilovecheese.com.

Deanna Rose, spokesperson with the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association, says, "Cheese is not only a great gift but because it is so versatile it can be served in many interesting ways. We also have several local cheese makers here in the Mid-Atlantic region who make a number of delicious varieties which will give your gifts a local flare."

Here is a listing of cheese makers in the Mid-Atlantic region.

½ cup toasted coconut

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease 9-inch-square baking pan.

Combine flour, baking powder and salt in medium bowl. Beat sugar, butter and vanilla extract in large mixer bowl until creamy. Beat in egg. Gradually beat in flour mixture. Stir in morsels, nuts and coconut. Press into prepared baking pan.

Bake for 20 to 25 minutes or until golden brown. Cool completely in pan on wire rack. Cut into bars. Makes about 16 bars.

Creating Holiday Traditions That Bring The Family Together

(NAPS) — Traditions can be a fun way to celebrate holidays with family and friends. They can help add a feeling of love and togetherness to any seasonal gathering.

Fortunately, it is easy to start a treasured tradition that is enjoyed for years to come. These are some ideas for creating your own yearly holiday happenings.

• Try taking the whole family to the lot to help choose a great tree. Because it is a tree to be enjoyed by all, everyone should take part in the tree selection. Remember to bring along a camera or video recorder to capture the fun moments on film.

• Start an ornament exchange by giving each family member a special ornament each year. Remember to label each ornament with the year it was given. Try exchanging them while decorating the tree. Brew some hot cider or chocolate and take the time to enjoy each other's company while swapping holiday keepsakes.

• Take holiday portraits. Professional portrait studios, such as The Picture People, can help create lifetime memories with family portraits. The Picture People also has fun props (like oversized snowmen and gingerbread men and a sleigh you can sit in), colorful backdrops and photographers who are experts at getting smiles on young faces.

• Give in to the gift-opening urge by allowing each family member to open one present on Christmas Eve. This can help bring everyone together for a few special relaxing moments before the excitement of Christmas morning.

• Bring holiday cheer to the neighborhood with a round of joyful caroling. The voices may not be ready for Broadway, but the neighbors will probably still appreciate the effort.

• For tasty holiday fun, bring hungry kids (and adults) into the kitchen to construct gingerbread houses. Key ingredients include empty milk boxes, graham crackers, icing, an assortment of candies and, of course, creativity.

• Put on a holiday music CD and gather loved ones together to create homemade tree ornaments and decorations, like popcorn, paper or dried cranberry chains.

• Take a holiday light tour to check out neighborhood decorations. Pile your family into the car at night and drive around town looking for homes with the best lights and displays, or walk around the block and check out displays closer to home.

Remember, traditions do not have to be limited to families. They can be created with friends, roommates, couples, classmates or even pets.

The best traditions never lose their fun and excitement.

QUESTION — May A. Eyster, Hummelstown, wants a recipe for old-fashioned raisin-filled cookies.

QUESTION — Christ Stoltzfus, Narvon, wants recipes to layer the following soups in jars to give as gifts: chili, chicken corn noodle, and friendship. Editor's Note: Some of these recipes appeared in last week's issue of Lancaster Farming on pages B6-B7.

QUESTION — Carrie Sponseller, Gettysburg, wants recipes to make dips of different varieties.

QUESTION — A Narvon reader writes that she accidentally discarded two recipes, which she had clipped from this column, that her family really liked. One recipe was for waffles, and the lady who had submitted it wrote that she sold them at a stand when she was young. The other recipe was for biscuits that used cold butter cut into the flour. Anyone know to which recipes she is referring? Please send in to be reprinted.

QUESTION — A steady reader is looking for a recipe for Wedding Soup made with chicken broth and tiny meatballs.

QUESTION — Frances Martin, New Holland, would like a recipe for persimmon wine and other recipes using persimmons.

QUESTION — Pat Elligson, Millers, Md., wants a recipe for good, moist old-fashioned fruit cake that is thick with fruit and nuts.

QUESTION — Linda Christman, Greencastle, wants a recipe for apple dumpling syrup made with the little red cinnamon heart candies.

QUESTION — June Martin, Oxford, N.J., wants a recipe to make venison hot dogs.

QUESTION — A reader wants recipes for a steak sauce or one to use as a marinade. She also wants to know how to make steaks that taste like those served at steak houses.

QUESTION — Frank Bonk, Perth Amboy, N.J., wants to know where to find fresh killed geese and goose livers.

QUESTION — Nina Biddle, Tyrone, has identical recipes for sugar cookies, one using Pillsbury flour and the other Gold Medal. Why do they taste differently if the identical ingredients are used?

QUESTION — A reader would like a recipe to make candy bars that taste similar to Nutrageous.

QUESTION — Gloria Miller, Christiana, lost the recipe for mini upside down pineapple cake, which is made in cupcake pans. Anyone have it?

ANSWER — A reader writes that when her children were in school, they had a cookie painting day during the Christmas season. She wanted a recipe for a paint to paint cookies. Thanks to Sandi Johnson, Mercersburg, for sending directions for the paint her family really enjoys using each holiday season. Sandi uses her favorite sugar cookie recipe, rolls out the dough and cuts 12 cookies at a time. That way the dough doesn't dry out too quickly. Place the cookies on a baking sheet. Paint and bake as directed, but don't let them brown.

Egg Yolk Paint

Blend well one egg yolk and ¼ teaspoon water. Divide mixture among several small custard cups. Add a different food coloring to each cup to make bright colors. Paint designs on cookies with small paintbrushes. If paint thickens, add a few drops of water.

ANSWER — P. Horst wrote that this summer she grew a plant called citron, which is in the watermelon family and wanted recipes using citron. Thanks to an anonymous subscriber for sending the following recipes.

Citron-Cherry Sauce

1 cup sour cream or thick yogurt
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ teaspoon grated lemon rind (optional)
1 teaspoon salt
¼ cup finely diced citron
¼ cup maraschino cherries, finely diced

Combine all ingredients and stir well. Serve with beef, lamb or pork.

Note: Instead of sour cream or yogurt, you can whip ½ cup sweet cream or whip ⅓ cup chilled evaporated milk no earlier than 30 minutes before serving. Add the remaining ingredients.

Citron Melon Preserves

2 pounds prepared citron melon
2 pounds sugar
1 lemon

Cut melon into ½-inch slices, crosswise. Trim off the green rind. Discard seed. Split the slices, keeping the inner and outer parts separate. These parts should be preserved separately because the outer portion requires longer cooking. Weigh. Cover with water and boil 25-35 minutes. Drain. Dissolve half the sugar in 4 cups water. Add citron. Boil 45 minutes. Let stand 12-18 hours in a cool place. Add remaining sugar and sliced lemon. Boil until citron is clear. If syrup becomes too thick, add boiling water. If syrup is too thin when citron is done, remove citron and boil syrup until thick — this depends upon the melon used. Pour, boiling hot into hot canning jars, seal at once.

Note: Citron preserves may be drained and used as a substitute for regular commercial citron, which is made from a tree-grown fruit — not a melon.

ANSWER — A subscriber wanted an exact recipe for making flaky pie crust that is not mealy or oily. Thanks to Charlene Kline, Wernersville, for sending her recipe, which she writes that she got from this column years ago. It always results in a flaky, tender pie crust.

Flaky Pie Crust

1 cup flour (I use Nolts, Snavely or Cerasota)
⅓ cup Crisco
½ teaspoon salt

Mix until crumbly with a pastry blender or in a food processor. Add:

¼ teaspoon vinegar
¼ cup ice water

Blend until a ball forms. Avoid using warm hands as this tends to make the dough tough. Yield: single crust.

ANSWER — Thanks to Peggy Thompson, McAlevy's Fort, for sending this recipe for Cindy Smith of Tyrone. Peggy writes that this recipe has been a favorite at her house for years. She'd make these when the children were smaller and they'd call them "Little Peggy's." Later when her daughter made them, she'd call them "Little Julie's." No matter what you call them, you'll love them, Peggy writes. They do, indeed, taste like Little Debbie Oatmeal Cream Pies. Peggy always doubles the recipe because they disappear so fast. If you want to save some for later, place 6-8 in a Ziploc bag and freeze.

Little Debbie Cakes

1 cup Crisco
3 cups brown sugar
4 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1½ teaspoon baking soda
3 cups flour
3 cups oatmeal

Filling:

2 egg whites, beaten stiff
3 cups confectioners' sugar
1 cup Crisco
1 teaspoon vanilla
Dash salt

For cookies: Cream Crisco and sugar, add eggs and vanilla. Mix in dry ingredients and oatmeal. Don't add more flour — dough is sticky. Drop on cookie sheet sprayed with vegetable oil spray and bake at 350 degrees for about 11 minutes. The secret is to not overbake — these are better soft than crispy. Allow to cool slightly before removing from baking sheet.

For filling: Cream together sugar, Crisco, vanilla, and salt. Mix in stiffly beaten egg whites. Spread filling between two cookies. Wrap separately in plastic wrap.

ANSWER — Thanks to Lycoming County Dairy Maid Kellyn Lovell for sending this recipe, which is a sweet treat that tastes like a Snicker's bar. Kellyn, 14, lives on a farm in Linden owned by her parents, Scott and Rhonda Lovell. They raise and milk Holsteins. Kellyn writes that promoting the dairy industry is very important to her. This is her second year as the Lycoming County dairy maid. She enjoys meeting people and making them aware of the value of milk and dairy products. She especially enjoys working with children. Kellyn also is homeschooled, plays basketball for Williamsport Homeschool Lady Flame, and plays the flute and piano. She is a member of Calvary Baptist Church of Jersey Shore, where she is active in the youth group and other ministries.

Kellyn said that her family makes this treat at Christmastime and it disappears fast.

ANSWER Thanks to Wyoming-Lackawanna Dairy Princess Becki Carr for sending these recipes for holiday entertaining. Becki suggests using a cheese ball for the centerpiece. It can be shaped into a ball or log and served with your favorite crackers. At the same time, it provides one of three servings of dairy needed daily, and is a nice, nutritional change from traditional holiday sweets.

Cheese Ball

8 ounces sharp or extra sharp cheese, shredded
8 ounces cream cheese, softened to room temperature
3 tablespoons dried onion soup mix
¼ cup Miracle Whip or mayonnaise
Finely chopped nuts

In a mixing bowl, beat shredded cheese with cream cheese, onion soup, and mayonnaise until well blended. Roll in chopped nuts and chill well. May be made into individual mini-cheese balls or rolled into a single log or ball. Best served with crackers.

Peppermint Ice Cream

3 large egg yolks, slightly beaten
2 cups real heavy whipping cream
½ cup sugar
1 cup milk
Green food coloring
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup crushed peppermint candies
¼ teaspoon salt

Mix together egg yolks, sugar, milk, and salt in a 2-quart saucepan. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly to almost boiling. Do not boil. Refrigerate, uncovered, in a chilled bowl for 2-3 hours, stirring occasionally until room temperature.

Stir in whipping cream and vanilla into milk mixture, then stir in crushed peppermint candy and a few drops of green food coloring into milk mixture.

Pour into 1-quart ice cream freezer and freeze according to manufacturer's directions. Serves about 8.

Throw Out Cashews? Some People Do

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A friend from South America said that when he was growing up, they threw cashew nuts away and ate the fruit instead.

What fruit was he talking about?

To some people, it must seem sacrilegious to even think about throwing away cashews. But it's a common occurrence in Brazil, the cashew's native country, and other areas where they grow.

The fruit your friend is talking about is actually a "false fruit" (the true fruit being the cashew nut). The false fruit is called the 'cashew apple" and, surprisingly enough, it grows on the "cashew tree." The fruit is almost pear-shaped, although it doesn't get as narrow at the top as pears do. Its flesh is spongy, fibrous and very juicy — people often chew it just for the juice, spitting out the fibrous residue. The nut is attached to the bottom of the false fruit, as a sort of short, stubby tail. It's encased in a double-layered outer shell (example — the true fruit, botanically speaking) shaped somewhat like a tiny boxing glove. And there's a very good reason why people throw it away: The shell of the true fruit contains a toxic, astringent, complex oily substance (a phenolic resin) which could cause skin to blister.

Now just wait before you spit out that cashew you just put in your mouth. The toxic part — the phenolic resin — is removed with the shells during processing, and roasting the nuts removes any residual toxic substance from the final product. Luckily, modern processing equipment reduces the chance of skin problems among farm workers and is better at extracting the oil from cashew nut shell. But there are still workers who shell the nuts by hand, and they often suffer from dermatitis. And that should be no surprise: The cashew tree, Anacardium occidentale, belongs to the same plant family as poison ivy, poison oak and poison sumac.

One ounce of cashews about 18 nuts — contains about 165 calories, 13 grams of fat, 9 grams of carbohydrates, 4.5 grams of protein, and less than a gram of fiber. They are rich in copper, iron and folic acid. An ounce of dry-roasted, salted cashews has about 180 milligrams of sodium. Oil-roasted salted cashews have about half that much. Both types without salt have less than 5 milligrams of sodium per ounce.

As Christmas approaches, I sit down and write 100 cards to our friends. My sister asked me if I know how much postage that will be and I said, "Yes, but it is worth it." It is our way of keeping in touch with those who live far away.

Next will be the cookie baking job which I enjoy. Many are frozen to be packed into Christmas boxes later. Again, it is the one time that we visit some of our neighbors in their homes.

Our three youngest grandchildren visited us a bit. The preschoolers grow rapidly or so it seems. Soon I won't have to put things out of reach when they come from Maine. All of us had our Thanksgiving with our oldest daughter in New Jersey. She is a gracious hostess and we had a delicious turkey meal. The cousins enjoy each other's company and the day is soon over. They range in age from two to 22. One is a teacher and the other still has to be caught.

During my husband's illness, we have been hearing from some of Lancaster Farming subscribers. They are older people who have their own problems or younger folks who are caring for older relatives, and they understand our situation.

Years ago an auctioneer from New Jersey took the time to hunt my house when he was at the New Holland Sales Stables. When I opened the front door he knew me, but of course, I did not know him. To me he was just a pleasant voice on the telephone when I called a sales report early on Monday morning. We are glad they took time to write.

Smart Stuff
with Twig Walkingstick
Dear Twig What's the deal with Christmas trees? Doesn't cutting them down wipe out forests?
Well, you might think so. But it doesn't. Most Christmas trees come from Christmas tree farms. The trees are renewable. And the farms, ideally, are sustainable.
'Renewable' means that a resource, like a Christmas tree, is replenished fairly quickly through natural processes. Christmas tree farmers plant lots of new trees to replace the trees they cut down (which were 4 to 15 years old, depending on the species).
And 'sustainable' means that a farm can grow what it grows for a very long time without hurting — and ideally while helping — the soil, the environment and the farmer's bank account. Well-run farms (of all types) are sustainable.
Every December, lots of people buy and decorate cut Christmas trees. And lots of people don't. Everyone is different. Which is as it is and as it should be. What's good to know either way is that Christmas tree farms give shelter to wildlife. Keep soil from eroding. Produce lots of oxygen (which we need). And help farmers, dirt poor, earn a living.
What's more than even Charlie Brown knows.
Sincerely,
Twig
The Ohio State University, College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences

What Is Temperament?

Have you ever wondered how two children with the same parents could be so different? Each child is born with his or her own style of interacting with people, places and things — their temperament. It is not something we can change.

Researchers have identified nine different traits present at birth and continue to influence development in important ways throughout life. These nine traits are:

- Activity level
- Rythmicity
- Approach/withdrawal
- Adaptability
- Intensity
- Mood
- Persistence and attention span
- Distractibility
- Sensory threshold

These traits combine to form three basic types of temperaments. Most children fall into one or the other of these types. Most children have some level of intensity on several temperament traits, but one dimension will usually dominate.

• Easy or flexible children are generally happy, calm, regular in sleeping and eating habits, adaptable, and not easily upset. Because of their easy style, parents need to be sure to talk to the child about their frustrations and hurts because these children will not demand it.

• Difficult, active or feisty children are often fussy, irregular in feeding and sleeping habits, fearful of new people and situations, easily upset by noise and commotion, high strung and intense in their reactions.

Providing lots of vigorous play for these children will help to work off stored energy and frustrations. It is important to allow these children some freedom of choice and to prepare them before changes occur.

Slow to warm up or cautious children are relatively inactive and fussy, tend to withdraw or react negatively to new situations, but their reactions become gradually more positive with continuous exposure.

It is important that these children have a routine that is followed, that you do what you say, and that you give them lots of time to establish new relationships.

Consumer Trends Improving In Beef Industry, Says CBB

DENVER, Colo. — Consumer beef trends suggest that the beef checkoff has been on the right track in its efforts to promote beef, an official of the Cattlemen's Beef Board told the Beef Promotion Operating Committee and state beef council representatives recently.

Rich Otley, director of evaluation for the Beef Board, said consumer attitude and behavioral research indicates that industry efforts in beef safety, convenience, nutrition and producer image are on the right track in developing better demand for the product.

Beef Board Vice Chairman Andy Tucker, a third generation beef producer from Florida, said it's important to research the issues to see how well the programs are addressing what's important to consumers.

"If our programs don't work, it will first be reflected in what's happening with consumer attitudes," Tucker said. "What they believe is a predictor of how they'll behave."

"While we can't establish a direct cause and effect relationship," said Otley, "it isn't hard to see that what the checkoff is trying to show consumers is being reflected in the attitudes that consumers have about our product, and the way they're reacting to beef. Since 1998, beef demand has been trending upward. The factors involved are those factors we address with our efforts."

Speaking to the Beef Promotion Operating Committee and executives of state beef councils in late September, Otley pointed to research about consumer confidence in the safety of U.S. beef as an example.

In early 2001, there was concern about beef safety in foreign countries because of discoveries of foot and mouth disease and BSE. But that concern wasn't reflected in consumer confidence in this country's beef supply.

In fact, at the height of the FMD scare in 2001, consumer confidence in the safety of U.S. beef stood at 87 percent and has since risen to 89 percent. "That's a signal that efforts made through the checkoff to assure consumers that their beef supply is safe were on the mark," Otley said.

Other data that suggests the industry is on the right track is the increasing number of people who believe beef is an important part of a balanced diet. In October 1999, market research indicated that 44 percent of people agreed with that statement.

'Mix It With Milk' Contest Gets Good Results

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The "Mix it with Milk 'n Mott's" contest, a partnership between the dairy promotion checkoff program and Mott's® applesauce, recently was completed after encouraging kids to create flavored drinks that include milk, Mott's products and other fun, flavored mix-ins.

The American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East hosted 11 local "Mix it with Milk" events where kids could create their own milk mixtures at state fairs, grocery stores and sporting events and kid-related festivals. 'Mix it with Milk' events reached more than 1,380 kids, ages 6-12 in ADADC Mid East's region and garnered more than 25 media interviews. The national contest collected nearly 1,000 entries.

One of the winners of the national contest was from the ADADC Mid East region. Ryan Johnson of Toledo, Ohio, created the Hawaiian Punch Chocolate Splash, a reddish-pink drink that tasted like a chocolate-covered cherry. As a reward, the sixth grader will receive a $1,000 savings bond and a year's supply of Mott's Applesauce.

Other related promotions proved successful as well:

- Coupons promoting the purchase of milk and applesauce in Sunday papers nationwide reached 46 million consumers, driving them to the grocery store to purchase milk and Mott's products.
- A video news release featuring kid chef Justin Miller received nearly 300 media placements nationwide, totaling nearly 10 million media impressions.
- The contest was promoted on 12 million packages of Mott's Fruitsations®.
- Point-of-sale leaflets on 5,000 store shelves across the United States encouraged kids to enter the contest.

"Dairy producers benefit when we can develop programs that work to get kids excited about drinking milk by encouraging fun and creativity," Scott Higgins, CEO of ADADC Mid East says. "If kids get in the habit of drinking milk when they're young, they're more likely to choose milk throughout their lives. That helps increase dairy demand for the long term."

ADADC Mid East is the local planning and management organization responsible for increasing demand for U.S.-produced dairy products on behalf of America's dairy farmers. ADADC Mid East works closely with Dairy Management, Inc.™, the national dairy promotion organization, to implement dairy promotion, education and research programs nationwide. The dairy farmer checkoff program funds both organizations.

Memories Of Christmas Past

GAY BROWNLEE
Virginia Correspondent

HARRISONBURG, Va. — One of the most inspiring and significant Christmas events for Julia Kauffman and her husband, Tom, occurred late in the 1950s when they were engaged in missionary work amid Kentucky's delightful and rugged mountains.

It was a performance of 'Messiah" composed by George Frederic Handel and rendered for the public by a group from the Cumberland College.

Then Julia was a young mother. She had never seen the oratorio done, although once in Canada her husband did, so they awaited the day with eager anticipation.

The couple loved good music. It was in their hearts and souls. To be granted the glorious opportunity of witnessing a live performance was considered a gift from God.

"Anytime there was good music around we took advantage of it," the couple said.

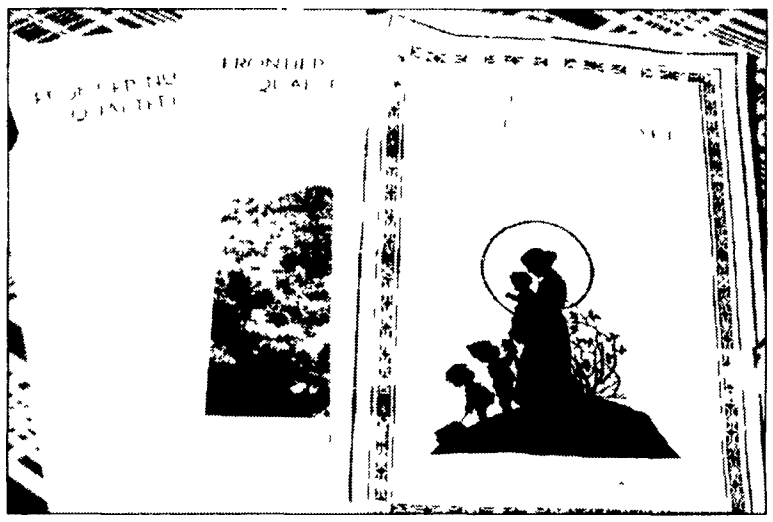
Off the family went, in the rusty Plymouth that had seen better days and that bounced them, merrily, over an obstacle course of gravel roads and potholes. Eventually, they had covered the 11-12 miles to reach the Oneida Baptist Church, which was hosting the performance.

"The thing we went for," Julia said, "was to hear the music and the singers. That's what really thrilled us."

"There was a lot of action. A lot of response from the audience," her husband said. 'We felt like we were in heaven."

They were accustomed to the a cappella style of singing that stemmed from having Mennonite roots and growing up in separate communities of Mifflin County, Pennsylvania.

At home, however, the advent of Christmas always generated excitement for the young couple. The four-room houses they lived in while in Kentucy seldom had enough space in those years for the addition of a Christmas tree, nevertheless there were gifts to unwrap.



The Frontier Nursing Service started in 1925, published quarterly bulletins that were widely read. The bulletins were a valuable connection to families in the mountains of Kentucky. The nurse-midwives of the Frontier Nursing Service were a blessing to missionary Julia Kauffman, when four of her five children were delivered at home.

Pictured at her sewing machine Julia Kauffman is constructing a Christmas gift that is bound to provide snuggly warmth for the recipient. She also sews professionally for a local bridal shop when gowns and dresses need to be altered for clients.

Best of all the Yoder and Kauffman relatives sent surprise packages from Pennsylvania and the children discovered new clothes for their doll babies, yummy homemade edibles and candy, under the wrapping paper.

"My oldest sister, Kathryn (Yoder), was very important to our children," Julia said, adding that their aunt knitted sweaters and other warm garments for them.

Julia says they lived a lifestyle in keeping with that of the local people. The dwellings had electricity in them but telephones came later. Instead of indoor plumbing, more often than not, folks just used outhouses.

"We lived as simple as the local people did. We had a refrigerator and deep freezer, and planted a big garden," said Julia.

Thus the homemaker used canning and freezing to preserve food and sewed clothes for the family. Her cozy home was comprised of the kitchen, living room, and two bedrooms.

Julia was unmarried when she first went to Kentucky, the employee of a family with five children. She not only did household chores to assist the mother, Esther Good, but Julia also accompanied her to the local public schools where the students received instruction from The Christian Education Plan For the Public Schools.

The hour-long lesson included a Bible story with flannelgraph illustrations and scripture verses. Recitation of these was important and the children could merit awards if they memorized verses.

"We visited by jeep the country schools," Julia said. "Sometimes we had to ford the streams in the jeep."

The rotation of their weekly visits was five schools one week and five the next week.

Meanwhile, subsequent to Julia's and Tom's introduction at a Bible School each had attended in Mifflin County before she left, a full-fledged romance had developed for which marriage was the only acceptable antidote.

Julia neither recalls the rosy blush in her cheeks that her sweetheart does when their eyes first met, nor the smile that passed between them, that still exists in his mind's eye with romantic clarity.

Tom had also moved to the Bluegrass State and was living with another family until their 1955 wedding in the Mattawana (Pa.) Mennonite Church.

The newlyweds settled into a house by the Bullskin Creek in Brutus, Ky. They were considered fully supported missionaries who received a stipend of $150 a month from the church body that was behind the work.

Prior to the birth of Judy, their eldest child, Julia received maternity care from the Frontier Nursing Service which was chartered in 1925. She expected to deliver her baby at home like other women in the hills did.

According to a bulletin from its 30th anniversary in 1955, the FNS by then was using a jeep, but nurses and nurse-midwives often had ridden into the mountains on horseback, the medical supplies stowed in saddlebags and fording rivers and creeks as necessary.

The FNS was committed to reach rural families with health care, inoculate the children against diseases, and teach information about keeping sewage away from the source of the familys water.

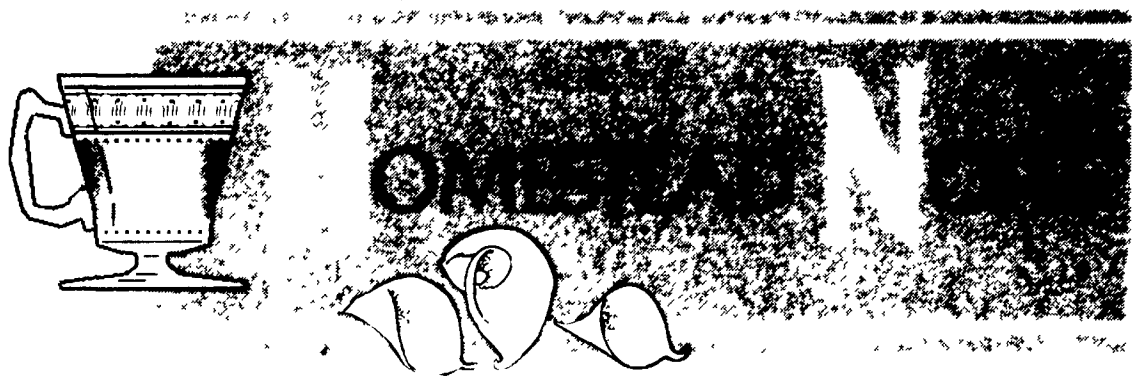
One nurse recalled in the same issue of the bulletin having spent a "summer in the saddle..."

Reportedly, the FNS was the first organization in America to use nurses qualified as midwives.

According to Julia, who praised the Service for its efficient, caring medical staff, families depended on and enjoyed the company of nurses, nurse-midwifes and doctors who traveled up and down the remote area and on waterways to administer medical care.

"When the patient would go into labor," said Julia, "the husband would go looking for the nurse."

"The nurses were very skilled and efficient," said Julia. 'We didn't even think of having health insurance," she said, adding that the total charge for prenatal and post-natal care was $25 until the fee was increased to $35.



A Christmas wreath that got a new bow for the yuletide season gets a final inspection from Julia Kauffman before she hangs it on the door of her home.

In Oct. 1957, Sherrill, the Kauffmans' second baby arrived during the Asian Flu epidemic. The nurse they were expecting to attend the delivery had herself contracted the disease and thus, a substitute came to daily bathe and care for the infant.

"The nurses weren't available when I went into labor with Joel," Julia recalled of her third home birth. "Tom was running all up and down the creek looking for a nurse-midwife."

Finally, at the FNS headquarters a note on the door provided a telephone number for him to call. At the time a female doctor visiting from Boston was a guest of the FNS and because the FNS was having great success in its work, she was eager to observe one of its newborn deliveries performed in the relative isolation of the mountains.

At long last, when she and the others finally arrived, newborn Joel was already an hour old and a neighboring lay person was caring for mother and child.

The little fellow had surpassed his due date by 23 days. Thus his parents were anxious for any catalyst that might initiate labor pains. They admitted to taking a rough jaunt in the jeep over unpaved roads with potholes in them. Julia scrubbed the kitchen floor to an inch of its life and on the notable March morning when Joel finally made his move, she had successfully planted the spring garden, as well.

Their house was on the "wrong" side of the creek when Christmas baby, Regina, arrived on Dec. 19. To wit, their drinking water had to be boiled and the creek had to be forded before they could go anywhere. Then her father-in-law helped Tom install a rock base in the water that was strong enough to accommodate crossing over in the jeep.

In Feb. 1965 they were domiciled again in Pennsylvania and for the fifth child's birth it was a novel experience for Julia to deliver Ruby in a hospital. It all seemed so different and disconnected from what she knew, and indeed, far more expensive.

Julia says she wouldn't trade the home delivery experiences for anything. They were blessed occasions that knit the family close as well as the community.

But Ruby was a born vocalist and lover of music who, according to the parents, would listen to Handel's "Messiah" for hours on end as a teenager.

Their children later expressed a desire to attend the Eastern Mennonite High School in Harrisonburg. The parents agreed and relocated the family Virginia, where, for the first time in her marriage, Julia took employment outside the home cooking for a nursing home until her feet signaled she should opt for something else. That's when she turned to professional sewing.

Seven of their grandchildren live in Virginia, two in California and two in Kansas.

Ever since her teen days in Mifflin County, Julia Kauffman has enjoyed sewing, but she shows an item here that she neither started, nor ever got around to completing. It is a postage stamp, baby quilt top composed of wee squares cut from material scraps. In Kentucky, 50 years ago someone gave it as a gift.

Starry snowflakes up to 6 feet wide and icicles up to 5 feet long sparkle in the trees surrounding the Open Air Theatre, where foundations take on the colors of a Christmas rainbow while they dance to holiday music from 5 p.m. to 9 p.m. (temperature permitting).

A Longwood Gardens Christmas runs through Jan. 5. Thousands of brilliant poinsettias, towering trees, fragrant flowers, and exotic plants fill four acres of gardens inside the Conservatory. Daily concerts add to the holiday magic. The Gardens are open every day 9 a.m.-9 p.m. (the Conservatory opens at 10 a.m.), including Christmas and New Year's Day. The Terrace Restaurant and the Gardens Shop are also open daily. Admission prices during the Christmas display are $15 for adults (no discount on Tuesdays), $6 ages 16-20, $2 ages 6-15, and free under age 6. Sentimental Value Counts For Keller Family

Although many people tend to collect what others want, Harold and Helen Keller, Mount Joy, said that as they grow older, pieces that attract them are those that hold nostalgia, such as Helen's great grandmother's coin purse made with a metal chain, a coal oil light from the church she attended as a child, a Little Jack Horner baby dish, and Minnie Mouse aluminum cookie cutters from her home.

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — Those who spend time with Auctioneer Harold Keller and his wife Helen are more likely to hear about the couple's eight children, spouses, and 17 grandchildren than the antiques they have collected over the years.

But after 42 years as an auctioneer, Keller knows quite a bit about the antiques that people collect and the importance of documentation. For this reason, the Kellers try to compile a bit of "life" history on the pieces they collect.

One of their most cherished pieces is a large chest purchased from a retired school teacher. Keller requested that the teacher write the history of the family heirloom to document the piece. The strong wooden chest with metal bindings and hand wrought lock was filled with necessities to help the owners establish life in a new land.

The chest crossed the Atlantic Ocean on a sailing vessel. In September 1865, the chest was again filled with useful and precious articles such as cloth, coffee, money, sugar, flour, legal documents, and other items.

During the Civil War, the Rebel Army marched northward, and its owners feared the Mount Joy and Marietta area would be destroyed. The chest was buried beneath a woodshed at the northeast corner of Center Square. Several cords of wood were stacked on top of the earth to conceal the stash.

Although the bridge at Columbia was burned by the Rebels, the army advanced no farther. The chest, property of Joseph and Anna Mary Shaeffer Strauss, was given a place of honor in their home until their death.

The most satisfying experience in his 42 years as an auctioneer, Keller said, "is discovering goodies that the owners didn't know they had and getting a fair price for them."

A discerning eye is needed to differentiate between "the real thing" and the reproductions that come up for bid.

Handling the "real thing" helps Keller spot a reproduction that doesn't quite have the same feel or look. He holds up a hand-painted plate and pointed out that it is translucent, evidenced by the slight shadow when a hand held in back of the plate is discernible.

"It's a Pickard," Keller said.

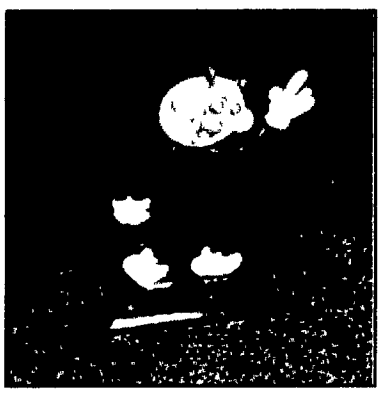
Pickard China was established in Edgerton, Wis. in 1893 by Wilder Austin Pickard. The company moved to Chicago in 1897. The decorating company specialized in hand-painted pieces by renowned artists from Europe and America. Dessert, tea sets, and occasional pieces are highly collectible especially if signed by an artist.

Keller grew up in Lebanon County and lived in Lancaster County most of his life. For this reason, he has a fondness for collecting items from both counties. These inclued a half-pint milk bottle from Spicklers Dairy, Elizabethtown, and a spoon used for pouring off cream in a cream-top bottle.

Keller said that he was inspired to become an auctioneer when he was nine years old and attended a Lebanon County sale. The auctioneer-pilot flew into the site and purchased lunch for the young boys who hovered around his plane.

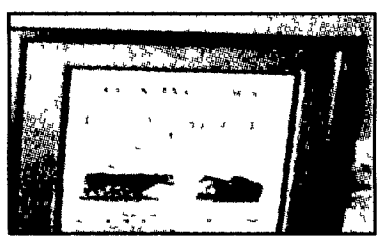
"But I was very shy and nervous. A lot of calamities happened in my family, and I was too scared to tell anyone that I wanted to become an auctioneer until after I was married and we had three children," Keller said.

His wife encouraged him to attend auctioneer school. She served as clerk and headed the food stand until recently, when her daughters took over.

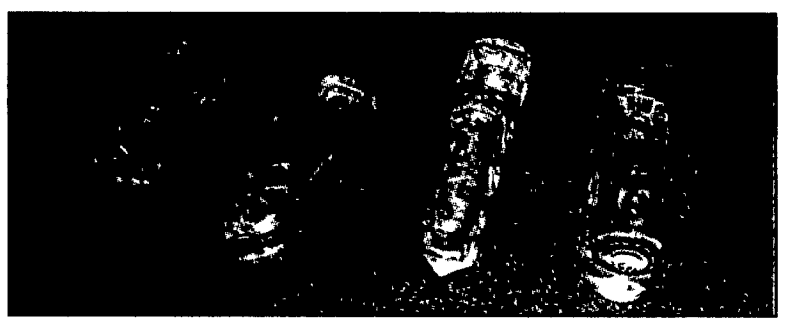


Reddy Kilowatt, corporate symbol of electrical power, was a promotional giveaway in the early 1930s. Sometime during the 1950s-1960s, electrical companies stopped using him, but his collectability continues to increase.

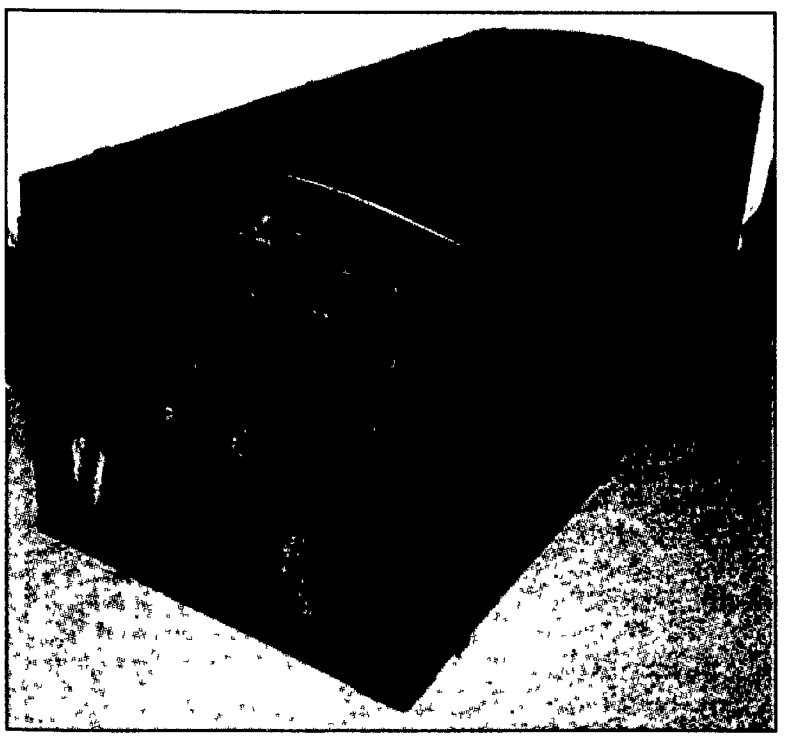
Pickard china was made in Edgerton, Wis. Established in 1893, Pickard specialized in hand-painted art pieces.



Keller also collects sale bills, such as this one dated 1887 (right). When translated from Pennsylvania Dutch, it reads "Look here. If you come early enough, we can start early, then perhaps we can send the stock home the same day...."



These spoons were used to extract the cream from cream-top milk bottles.



If only this chest could tell of its travels. It crossed the Atlantic Ocean on a sailing vessel in the 1700s. In September 1865, as the Rebel Army marched north during the Civil War, the chest was filled with valuables such as cloth, coffee, money, sugar, flour, and legal documents, and buried beneath a wood shed in Center Square. The handwrought nails, bindings, and lock have never rusted — evidence of fine workmanship, according to Harold Keller.

Roseville china from Ohio, strawberry creamers by Royal Bayruth-Bavaria, a chintz-patterned creamer, Pickard etched china, and an Italian vase are among some of the different items the Kellers have attained.

England's William & Mary Style Furniture Copied In Many Countries

Although it was introduced more than 300 years ago, beginning in 1689, with the reign of the Dutch William III and his first cousin, Queen Mary II, William and Mary furniture is as popular as ever.

Copies were made in Holland and America, and reproductions are still being made. These days a single chair can sell for thousands of dollars, when it makes a rare auction appearance. An American version gets top dollars.

The early origins of this important design movement are found in the court style of Louis XIV at Versailles. It and the technique of marquetry found its way to England with the emigrating French Huguenot artists and craftsmen. It blossomed in Holland at William's and Mary's residence at het Loo in Holland, where the floral marquetry, especially the tulip motif, became important. The pattern was often of flowers and leaves alone, or sometimes in a vase.

Arabesque marquetry, consisting of an overall intricate pattern of tight swirly lines had its roots in Islamic designs. Yet another unusual marquetry pattern was developed at this time; the seaweed or endive motif, so named because of its intricately intertwined pattern. Probably most identifiable with the period is the chair shape introduced by Daniel Marot, an architect. The chair ha·' a tall, thin back with a carved top, a low seat, short turned back legs and cabriole front legs.

Marot, a Frenchman, who had fled from France, became the chief designer of William. His early designs were in the French baroque style. Some of the most elegant pieces don't resemble the traditional William and Mary look. For example, lacquered cabinets on stands often had silvered wood cornices and legs. In fact, silver was high fashion for a brief time. Sheets of repousse' silver were shaped over an oak carcasse.

Cane enjoyed a brief popularity for seats and back of chairs. The earlier examples were coarse, becoming finer by 1685.

Legs are turned to trumpet shapes or scrolled.

Among the woods used were oak and walnut. However, beech was used for painted or Japanned chairs.

In England, during their reign, furniture is distinguished by complex inlay and marquetry techniques and the quality of the carving. Sometimes pieces were veneered with many different woods.The oyster pattern marquetry was extremely popular.

The carving was mostly flowers, foliage and scrolls.

Case pieces, such as cabinets on stands, often used Japanning (an imitation of oriental lacquering) in Chinese motifs known as chinoiserie.

CLUES: Two of the most reproduced pieces are the side chairs with cane paneled backs, framed with heavy carving.

Many pieces of this period that come to market have been altered over the centuries. For example, feet are often cut dow·n, putting stretcher rails at floor level. This substantially lowers values.

Reproductions of the side chair were made at the same time in Holland. More than one type of turning was used.

American versions were of native woods, such as maple, beech and walnut. It is difficult to tell English from American since the carving was often of equality.

In England the William and Mary style was versatile enough to be adapted to different levels of society, not only royalty. While the greatest carvers and gilders of the day created masterpieces in wood, the style filtered down to the average craftsmen, who simplified the designs and used materials at hand.

In America the use of fine veneers didn't begin until 1690, the beginning of the William and Mary period. It lasted until the 1720s.

Rare Engine Roars to New World Record At German Technical Antiques Auction

COLOGNE, GERMANY - A specialty auction of technical antiques on November 30 by Auction Team Breker offered an early internal combustion engine, invented in 1870 by Nicolaus August Otto and Eugen Langen in Cologne. The engine was sold after intense bidding to an overseas collector for a new world record price of $192,275.

The same auction offered historical typewriters, including an 1873 Sholes & Glidden model by E. Remington & Sons, Ilion, N.Y., which sold for $24,000. Described as the world's first typewriter produced in series, the "Writing Ball" by Pastor Malling Hansen from 1867 went for $55,000 into a new private overseas collection.

Other top prices were paid for a rare American Hamilton automatic typewriter from 1887, which went for $19,230 back to America into a private collection. And the legendary cipher machine of World War II - the "Enigma" - went for $18,000 to a bidder from the Far East.

A rare and desirable Norwegian deluxe-telephone from 1885 changed hands for a new high of $9,000. And a nearly prehistoric looking Swedish flat iron set a new world record price at $7,800.

The rare American gambling machine with musical box, a Mills: On the Square from 1905, went from France via Germany to Switzerland for $13,800. What was billed as the world's first studio tape recorder, invented in 1939 by German AEG in Berlin, sold for surprisingly high $4,000.

The self-playing Orchestrion by Paul Loesche, Leipzig, from 1920, in need of a full restoration still made $13,220, and went from an old Egyptian Harem House to a new private Swiss home.

A salesman's sample of a steam fire engine from about 1880 by French manufacturer Radiguet, Paris made $10,815.

Fascinating History Connected To Thierry's Suite

BOB JACKMAN
Antiques & Arts

BOSTON, MASS. — Seldom has a suite of furniture boasted such an unusual provenance; an 18th Century French high style bedroom set possesses not only a history of royal production, but also the brutal mob killing of its original owner. It was once sold to support a revolution, saw one of its owners tossed into debtor's prison, traversed the high seas and was ultimately installed in a quiet Boston home.

The suite, now on display in a new and permanent exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts, Boston, was created by menuisier Jean-Baptiste-Claude Sene on commission from Marc-Antoine Thierry de Ville d'Avray, the general administrator of the crown furniture. The set was created to royal standards and featured fabric with a pattern designed exclusively for the use of Louis XVI. Comprised of an alcove bed, a bergere, two fauteuils, a chaise en prie-dieu (kneeling chair), four chaises (side chairs) and an ecran (firescreen), the suite is considered to be the only complete large suite of high style late 18th Century French furniture in America. Documentation at the Garde-Meubles reveals the entire suite was destined for Thierry's bedchamber in his royal apartment.

In the antiques literature, this set has usually been called the Swan collection, but that causes confusion since there are about 40 pieces of Swan furniture in the MFA collection. The term "Thierry suite" has been adopted.

MFA European Decorative Arts Curator Tracey Albainy noted, "High style French furniture was at its most sophisticated level in the 18th Century. During that time, France produced the most elegant furniture in the world. The Thierry set was produced to royal standards with fabrics made specifically for Louis XVI. This set is the top. It is the finest complete set of late 18th Century French furniture in America, possibly in the Western Hemisphere."

Thierry's enjoyment of the set was short-lived. The set was installed in his apartment in late 1787. The French Revolution broke out in July 1789. Thierry initially escaped to the countryside, but he was found and arrested for living "in Asian sumptuousness."

Thierry spent a couple years in prison where ultimately the prisoners were told they would be allowed to escape. Their cells were unlocked, and the prisoners ran to the main gate, which they were surprised to find closed. A waiting mob chased the prisoners against the gate and butchered them.

Bostonian merchant James Swan arrived in France in 1787 where he hoped to trade in American produce such as wheat, tobacco and naval supplies.

The destruction of social order following the French Revolution placed a premium upon these goods, and Swan's business prospered. In 1792 the French government declared all property of the crown, church and fleeing aristocrats to be public property. That property was subsequently sold in negotiated sales or at auction. Swan bought numerous items. Many of these he sold, but the best he shipped back to America, including the Thierry bedchamber suite, where they were installed in the Dorchester (Boston) home where his wife and daughters lived.

In 1808 Swan and a business partner had a falling out, and the partner alleged that Swan owed him a large amount of money. Swan refused to pay and was sentenced to debtors' prison in France. Swan lived stylishly in prison until 1830 when he was freed by another revolution.

The Thierry suite was unusual in that it arrived in an American home as an intact set. Unfortunately, upon the death of Mrs. Swan, the set was divided among four heirs. From that time forward, the set received differing levels of use, care and reupholstering. Fortunately, in most instances the original upholstery was retained beneath new layers, and this set has provided information not previously available to antiquarians.

Royal Bedroom Suite

To see the set in its proper historical context, one needs to realize that France had two entirely separate groups of guilds that produced furniture. The most elegant and formal of French furniture was produced in the menuisier tradition and it made extensive use of fabrics. Curator Albainy noted, "The menuisier produced the finest French furniture. In this period, the two finest menuisier in France were Jean-Baptiste-Claude Sene and Gorges Jacob.

This set was created by Sene."

The central role of fabric with this furniture is essential for understanding the works. As gilding restorer Cynthia Moyer commented, "This type of furniture was created as vessels to support the display of this magnificent silk. The primary motifs, fringes and tassels were opulent, rare and extremely expensive. Wood was a secondary element. In this instance it was gilded, but in some other sets it was painted."

A separate guild of French craftsmen produced a high country style of furniture with characteristics often found on English furniture. The ebeniste (cabinetmakers) crafted works that featured fine fire gilded bronzes mounted on frames veneered with highly figured wood. As Moyer noted, "This furniture was created to support the ornate castings." French royals furnished their countryside retreats with this less formal furniture. While the Thierry suite is not in this tradition, the MFA exhibition displays two examples in this style from Marie Antoinette's retreat at Hameau outside of Versailles.

The architecture of the exhibition room housing this remarkable set does recall a period French bedroom with high ceilings and a square format. The set, however, is not presented in a bedchamber arrangement or isolated from other objects. There is an extensive presentation of other remarkably fine period works. The room offers one of the most exciting presentations of late 18th Century French arts on view in America.

Exhibition designer James Armbrister commented, "When we got everything in place, the experience became emotional. It took my breath away. It is a great room that sparkles and is beautiful."

Restoration

An intense restoration project was necessary to present the suite in its original splendor. As experts examined fabric fragments, wooden frames and historical documents, they gained numerous insights into high-style Louis XVI period furniture, some directly contradicting earlier speculation by experts. This project may have produced more revolutionary reinterpretations of the field than any previous study.

The original vision of reuniting the Thierry suite in uniformly gilded surfaces and bearing the original upholstery pattern was developed by former MFA French Decorative Arts Curator Anne Poullet. Poullet and then-MFA conservator Jeffrey Munger oversaw the first half of the project. They sought the advice of Brian Considine, director of the Getty Museum, which has an exceptional French furniture collection. He dispatched gilding consultant Cynthia Moyer to Boston where she examined the set in April 1998.

Moyer's examinations and tests indicated that four of the ten pieces in the suite had their original gilding on the surface, and others had some original gilding beneath later layers. The best-preserved examples were probably those that had been least used — the alcove bed, firescreen and two side chairs. Unfortunately even these had a thick acrylic resin coating applied by earlier conservators. Considine and Moyer recommended that the set be shipped to the Getty where Moyer could properly conserve it.

Moyer exclusively conserved this set from April 1998 to September 1999. Along the way she made a number of discoveries. Chief among those was that each piece of the set had been originally gilded in three different techniques: oil gilding, burnished water gilding and matte water gilding. While the use of multiple gilding methods became widespread in the mid-19th Century, it was once believed that the three techniques had not been used simultaneously on individual pieces of Eighteenth Century furniture.

In 1996 Moyer found evidence of three gilding techniques on a single set in the Getty. In reporting her study, she described that set as unique. Several years later when she again found three techniques on the Thierry set, it became clear that the practice was a bit more widely used.

Moyer explained the reason for using the three techniques on a single work. "It was both practical and aesthetically pleasing. Leaf carving that forms the central band of the frame has an ornately carved surface that could be more easily gilded in the oil technique than either water technique. Also the three types of gilding produce three different lusters that is also pleasing."

Yet more surprising was Moyer's discovery that the set had been originally painted white rather than having been gilded. Fortunately the history of the set was recorded in extensive records maintained by the French government. In 1664 the office of Garde-Meubles was officially established to keep records of royal furnishings. In those records the Thierry suite is known as Number 181 of 1787. Every contractor and subcontractor is noted with a description of the work done and its cost.

When Moyer reported finding white paint, conservator Jeffrey Munger searched the records for evidence. Indeed he found the set had been originally painted, but that Thierry visited Sene's workshop and requested a change to gilded surfaces.

Garst Announces Soybean Varieties

SLATER, Iowa — Soybean Product Manager Scott Hart announced that Garst Seed Company will deliver 18 new soybean varieties to Garst's extensive soybean lineup and two new varieties to the PSA-brand lineup for the 2003 crop year.

The new products offer extended solutions to growers' needs along with added performance and value.

"Our current product lineup looks exceptional this year," Hart said. "The reports from the field have been fantastic, and demand for this coming season looks strong."

The lineup of new products boasts a variety of benefits. Many of the new varieties are resistant to Phytophthora Root Rot, and of the 20 new products, all but two are Roundup Ready® varieties. This herbicide resistance allows growers to take advantage of increased crop-protection possibilities with this technology.

"Many of the Roundup Ready® cyst varieties in Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota are showing some great Iron Deficiency Chlorosis tolerance," Hart said.

Also added to the lineup are four new varieties following in "The Dozen" tradition. The Dozen soybean products offer both the Roundup Ready® technology and Soybean Cyst Nematode (SCN) protection that create a superior product for SCN-infected soils.

For more SCN resistance Garst has come out with two additional Roundup Ready®, SCN soybean varieties that are stacked with PI88788 and Hartwig backgrounds. The new varieties perform best in soils with a history of severe SCN infestations.

New Tax Law Speeds Equipment Payback

MOLINE, Ill. — To help stimulate the nation's post-9/11 economy, this past March Congress passed and President Bush signed the Job Creation and Worker Assistance Act of 2002.

This law contains a provision that can deliver significant financial and machinery inventory management benefits to producers.

"This new law provides the opportunity to take an additional first-year depreciation in the amount of 30 percent on capital expenditures, such as a piece of new equipment, purchased after Sept. 11, 2001, and before Sept. 11, 2004," said David Freund, manager of federal taxes, John Deere.

Freund points out that with the 30 percent added to existing allowed depreciation, producers can enjoy a total first-year write-off of 37.5 percent. Using a $100,000 piece of equipment purchased new in 2002 as an example, the depreciation for this tax year would be $37,497 (based on a seven-year depreciation schedule using 150 percent declining balance). This compares to a first-year write-off of $10,710 without the additional depreciation.

"Economic advisers within the Bush administration have stated that the tax benefit from the bonus depreciation is equivalent to about a four percent price reduction on capital items you purchase," Freund said.

"The purchase of depreciation," he said, "is to allow you to get your investment back on capital expenditures over the useful life of those properties. The bonus depreciation lets you get your investment back at a quicker pace, allowing you to take advantage of the time value of money."

Purdue University Professor of Ag Economics and Extension Economist George Patrick said, "Over the life of the law, the bonus depreciation will give producers more choices and more options in managing their taxable income."

Those options can also extend to how you mange your operations' overall machinery inventory. For instance, said Thomas Jarrett, director of taxes, John Deere, "If you're a producer who typically turns key pieces of equipment every three years, there maybe some benefit to replacing those machines in two years. If you turned a tractor or combine you purchased this year prior to the end of the tax law on Sept. 11, 2004, you'd have the opportunity to upgrade to the most current equipment technology and take advantage of the additional first-year depreciation not once, but twice." (On trade-ins, only the additional money paid, or "boot," qualifies for the bonus depreciation.)

It's important to note that the additional depreciation is available only on new, and not used, equipment. However, major repairs or reconditioning that extends the use life of machinery, and can thus be capitalized, is eligible for the depreciation benefit.

Freund, Patrick and Jarrett all agree that you should consult your tax adviser to determine how this tax-saving opportunity applies to your specific situation. You may also want to ask your adviser about another tax break known as the Section 179 deduction, which may allow up to $24,000 of capital purchases to be written off during 2002. The Section 179 deduction applies only to producers who acquire no more than $200,000 of equipment during the year.

Case Introduces Advanced Design In Rotor

RACINE, Wis. — In response to the expanded capacity and productivity needs of combine operators, Case IH has announced a breakthrough in rotary combine technology — the AFX rotor.

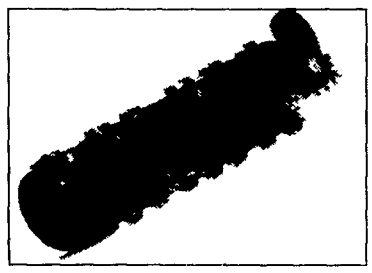
"The Case IH AFX rotor is the most advanced design in rotor technology on the market today," said Leo Bose, marketing and training manager for Case IH harvesting equipment. "Our new rotor increases throughput in a Case IH 2388 Axial-Flow combine by up to 25 percent, while improving fuel efficiency and reducing wear."

AFX rotor technology is the first piece in a new generation of single rotor combine development from Case IH. It continues to deliver the superior grain quality, grain savings, crop adaptability and simplicity that have distinguished the Axial-Flow line for more than 25 years.

"The Case IH AFX rotor takes harvesting technology to a new level," said Bose. "It will improve throughput capacity between five and 25 percent over the previous specialty rotor design, particularly in tough harvesting conditions."

Graduated pitch inlet flights transition crop from the feeder to the rotor cage. This design creates smoother, more consistent flow of material from the feeder to the threshing and separating areas.

The rasp bar configuration also has been redesigned to provide more "grain on grain" threshing, a hallmark of all Axial-Flow combines. The result is reduced wear and tear on threshing components, improved throughput, quieter operation and reduced horsepower requirements in tough harvesting conditions.



Case IH AFX rotor.

"The Case IH AFX rotor can also be retrofitted into late model 1688, 2188 and 2388 Axial-Flow combines," he notes. "The unique ability to upgrade Case IH equipment speaks to our commitment to the needs of our customers and the simplicity and superiority of the Axial-Flow rotary system."

An upgraded rotor drive helps maintain constant rotor speed, despite varying crop conditions. The new drive has larger rotor drive pulleys, along with a spliceless rotor drive belt to improve the belt's reliability and service life.

"More and more farmers are opting to collect on-the-go yield data during harvest, and they're also correlating that information with differential Global Positioning System (GPS) data to map their fields," says Bose. "Using the updated Case IH Advanced Farming System (AFS) Universal Display Plus, combine operators can now see moisture and yield maps develop as they travel through their fields."

New Woods Loader Fits 16 Popular Compact Tractors

OREGON, Ill. — Woods Equipment Company recently introduced the new Model 1008 loader, custom designed for tractors with 20 to 30 PTO horsepower and with mounts to fit 16 popular tractor models.

As the newest addition to Woods 1000 Series front-end loaders, the 1008 is packed with high performance, high productivity features, and an optional, pin-style quick attach coupler for fast and easy changes between bucket and pallet fork.

"The 1008 is a welcome addition to our line of 1000 Series loaders," said Tom Taylor, ag and turf marketing manager. "This new loader provides an option for operators who are looking for more capacity and breakout force than our model 1006, but who don't need a loader in the weight and capacity class of our Model 1009. The new model 1008 fills that performance gap."

The construction grade bucket offers durability, rigidity, and convenience; its reinforced top and bottom beams add extra strength and create a smoother dig. Each unit is complete with replaceable pivot, bushings, and large diameter pins; integral grill guard; rod-type bucket level indicator, and robust hydraulic cylinders. The regenerative bucket function ensures fast dumping, while series circuit construction allows for two operations at once.

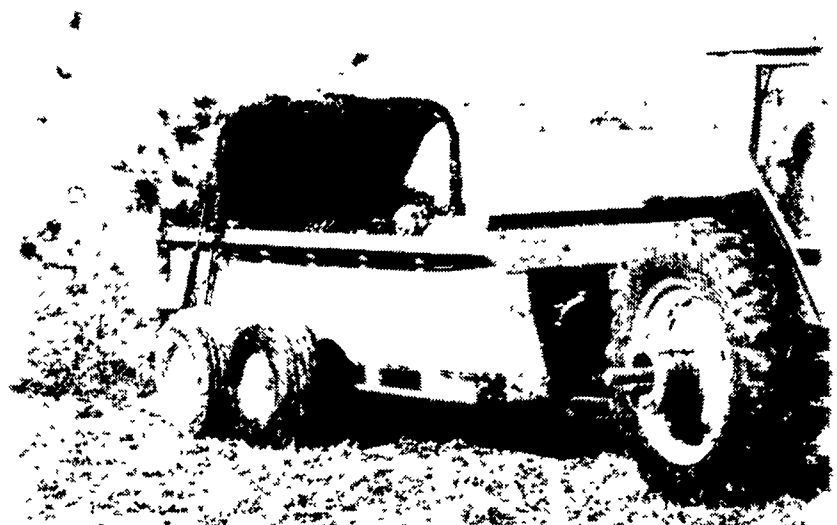
Match A Spreader To Your Needs



Without Spreading Yourself Too Thin

Get Unmatched Flexibility At A Great Price.

With eight sizes to choose from and a wide variety of options it's easy to see how the New Idea 3700 Series Spreaders meet the needs of any operation Their aggressive main beater paddles are strategically spaced and angled to shred a wide range of material while giving you a consistent spread pattern

Culvert-grade galvanizing over one-piece, copper-bearing steel sides provide a barrier against rust and corrosion And for hauling long distances the truck-mount option proves to be the safest, most economical way to transport large amounts of material

To see how simple it is to customize your spreading operation, contact your AGCO® New Idea dealer today You'll be surprised how much time and money you'll save with the New Idea 3700 Series Spreaders

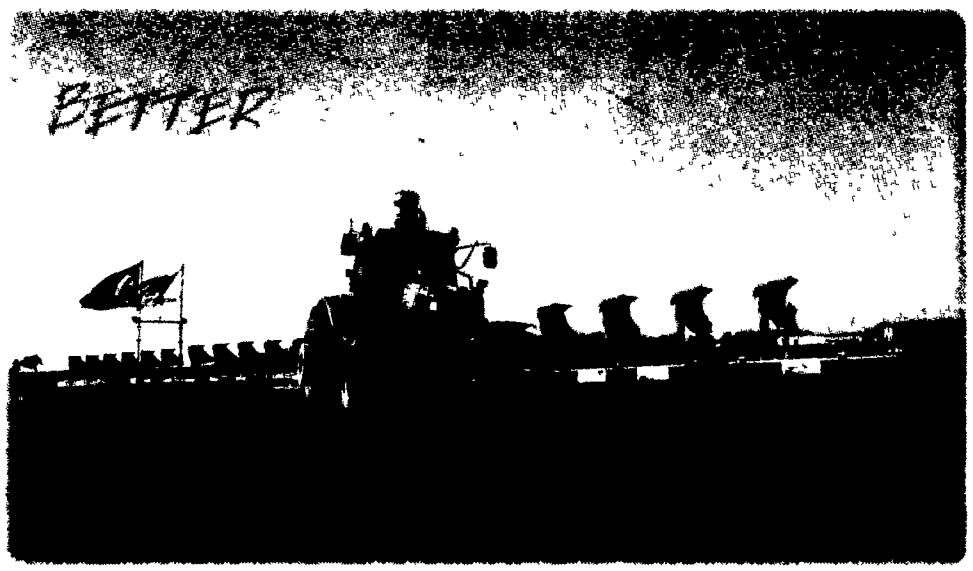
SAE LIL WOODS Glencoe



How do you shatter the world plowing record set by a 425 hp track tractor? You don't have to get bigger. You don't have to get tracks. You just have to get better. That's what happened when the Massey Ferguson 8280 fixed frame wheeled tractor set a new world record. The MF 8280 fine tuned to deliver 387 hp, outdid the predecessor by nearly 100 acres, plowing 621 acres in 24 hours.

What makes the MF 8280 better? Take a world class engine, a transmission that won't quit and add a powerful hydraulic system. Throw in a high tech control system that automatically monitors and adjusts the flow of power to the wheels for less slip and you've got better... more than 24 acres an hour better.

So don't just get a bigger tractor next time you have a big job to do. Get a better tractor. Get a Massey Ferguson 8280 and shatter some records yourself.

Agreement Paves Way For Better, Smarter Regulation Of Biopharmaceuticals

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — ProdiGene, Inc., a leader in the development of biopharmaceutical production and applications, announced that it had reached agreement with the USDA's Animal Plant Health Inspection Service, or APHIS.

The settlement deals comprehensively and finally with allegations arising from activities in Iowa and Nebraska. The agreement also addresses concerns raised by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Anthony Laos, president and chief executive officer of ProdiGene, stated that, "We are pleased to put recent allegations behind us, and are optimistic about the future of biopharmaceuticals and their regulation. ProdiGene leads the nation in research and permit applications in this new field. As a result, we expect the enhanced compliance program we are developing in close cooperation with USDA to set the benchmark for regulating the entire industry.

"The future of biopharmaceuticals has simply never been brighter," Laos noted. "ProdiGene's proven technology provides safe, non-animal sourced proteins, along with significant economic benefits over traditional production methods. Our technology holds the promise of reducing the cost of production and increasing the availability of pharmaceuticals to better combat diseases like AIDS and to reduce human misery at home and abroad.

"The settlement with the government was not without cost to ProdiGene," Laos further stated. "The settlement will call for us to pay a fine of $250,000, and to reimburse the government for the cost of destroying 500,000 bushels of soybeans that allegedly came into contact with a tiny amount of corn stalks and leaves. Although USDA has pledged to dispose of the soybeans 'efficiently and economically,' total costs may be in the millions. Nevertheless, we are confident that ProdiGene will be able to continue the responsible development of biopharmaceutical applications.

"The process of negotiating with USDA has sometimes been trying, but always amicable and professional. USDA even thanked us for our 'cooperation during the process of developing the consent decision and order.' USDA has also indicated that it considers the settlement agreement to address finally and comprehensively all the issues raised in Iowa and Nebraska. Importantly, the allegations alone will not be used as a basis for denying future permit applications," Laos observed, referencing a letter from USDA that was provided to reporters.

"We have learned some valuable lessons," Laos noted, "and we hope the entire industry will benefit from our endeavors as we work with USDA on an enhanced compliance program."

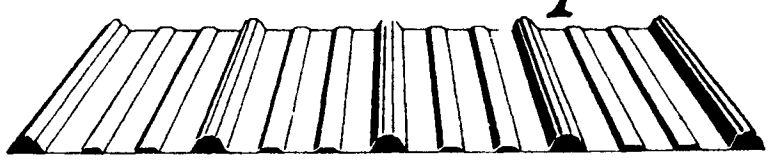
Rural Economy



Cost-efficient Centurydrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

What's against soft paint?

In metal roofing and siding some manufacturers use soft pliable paint to prevent cracks. The disadvantage with softer paint is that it scratches so easy Handling during erection, flying debris during storms, children playing against it, etc can easily scratch softer paint Scratches on softer paints tend to rust prematurely Everlast heat forms to prevent this Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important.
